STABILISATION PACT EFFECTED THREE POWERS IN COLLABORATION

France, Britain and U.S.
Reach Understanding
PARIS TAKING STEPS TO DEVALUE
FRANC TO 100 TO THE POUND

Paris, Sept. 25.
M. Henri Auriol, the French Finance Minister, will announce to-night that he is convoking Parliament Monday to approve devaluation of the franc, as part of a general scheme for the realignment of world currencies.—United Press.

HITCH IN AGREEMENT?

Paris, Sept. 26.
There is apparently a hitch in the financial agreement between Britain, France and America, and the Finance Minister was telephoning to Washington at 1 a.m. to-day.—Reuter.

Paris, Sept. 25.
Details of an international monetary agreement reached between France, Great Britain and the United States, will be published this evening.

The text will be made known at 11 p.m., British Standard Time. Meanwhile, it looks as if the pound, dollar and franc would be stabilised within certain limits.

Well informed quarters declare it to be practically certain that the franc will be fixed at 100 to the pound sterling.

Parliamentary approval of the new level of the franc is expected to be given before noon on Tuesday and it is understood the Government will introduce measures to compensate French nationals who have suffered heavy losses.

Monday's sitting of Parliament, now a certainty, will be devoted exclusively to finance. Parliament will adjourn until October 27 as soon as the Government's programme is approved. The date is expected to be held, but even the Communists are gradually veering to favour devaluation.—Reuter.

Official Decrees

Paris, Sept. 26.
An official decree closes the French Stock Exchange until further notice at the request of the Government. Commercial payments in gold or foreign currencies, falling due after September 27, will be paid in francs. It is learned that sixteen bills will be submitted to Parliament governing the new financial arrangements.—Reuter.

Parliament Must Act

Paris, Sept. 25.
M. Louis Malvy, Radical Socialist leader, said to-day that Parliament would likely be convoked on Monday or Tuesday to vote the necessary gold protection laws. It is noteworthy that the Cabinet is empowered to decree any measures to prevent the outflow of gold except changing the value of the franc, for which Parliament must enact legislation.

Meanwhile, the Cabinet has been in session to discuss the monetary situation. It is reported it contemplates taking gold exports and has tentatively fixed 33 per cent. as the figures of the levy. It is understood the Cabinet is also considering demanding a prior declaration of intention to export gold to be given by the Ministry of Finance, which shall be authorised to refuse an export permit.

Blum Stays in Paris

The Cabinet later intends to confer with the President, M. Albert Lebrun, who will sign any decrees decided upon. The Prime Minister, M. Leon Blum, has cancelled his scheduled departure for Geneva to-night in order to remain in Paris during the crisis.

Meanwhile the House session to-day was the most exciting in months. Prices advanced early on French nationals hedging against inflation. However, a special House committee ruled that speculative marginal operations could not be carried over the month's end, thus tending to curb speculation. Later, rumours that the Government planned to take action to prevent speculation caused

HONGKONG DOLLAR NOT AFFECTED

A British bank authority, questioned to-day, said it was difficult to forecast the result of the monetary changes until the ratios were known, which would probably not be until this evening.

The local dollar, being a managed currency, would not be affected at all, though it would have been affected based on silver. The change would affect the U.S. and possibly that dollar would fall slightly, he said.

An American banker said it was impossible to forecast, though he agreed that the local dollar would not be affected.

The Government was trying to keep the relation between the pound and the H.K. dollar constant. The U.S. dollar had declined slightly this morning but this was not an indication that it would remain depressed, he said.

The dumping of shares, with buyers scarce.—United Press.

Later.
The trend on the Bourse was soon reversed, buyers turning to outright purchases instead of marginal dealings and all prices soared, closing higher, including the Bank of Paris, at 850, up 100, Suez Canal, 20,875, up 135, Royal Dutch Shell, 3,255, up 35. French investors bought heavily in international securities.—United Press.

Accord Achieved

Washington, Sept. 25.
It is believed that progress towards a Franco-American monetary accord with Great Britain, an interested third party, has been achieved in conferences between M. Jean Appert, French financial attaché here, and Mr. Archibald Leitch, director of the U.S. Stabilisation Fund, Mr. G. C. Haas, chief of the Treasury's research staff, Mr. Herman Oliphant, Treasury attorney, Mr. Herbert Fels, State Department financial expert, and Mr. Wayne Taylor, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

It is understood the proposed accord is the forerunner of some readjustment of the franc. However, details are guarded, although it is reported that France is seeking the

BRITISH TREASURY POLICY

TO PROMOTE WORLD PROSPERITY
THREE-POWER AGREEMENT

London, Sept. 25.

A statement concerning the monetary agreement between Britain, France and United States was issued by the Treasury to-night, and discloses that the British Government, after consultation with the French and American Governments, will join them in affirming the common desire to foster conditions which will safeguard peace, best contribute to the restoration of order in international and economic relations, and pursue a policy tending to promote the prosperity of the world.

The British Government, in its policy towards international monetary relations, must take into full account the requirements and internal prosperity of the countries of the Empire, as corresponding considerations will be taken into account by the Governments of France and the United States, the statement says. The Government reaffirms its purpose to continue a policy pursued in recent years, the one constant object of which was to maintain the greatest possible equilibrium in the system of international exchanges and to avoid to the utmost extent the creation of any disturbance of that system by British monetary action.

The British Government shares with the French and United States Governments the conviction that continuation of this two-fold policy will serve the general purpose which all governments should pursue.

FRENCH STANDPOINT

The French Government has informed the British Government that

LITTLE ENTENTE ALARMED

BY EDEN'S ADDRESS TO ASSEMBLY REFORM OF TREATIES

Berlin, Sept. 26.

Approval with reserve marks the first comments on the speech of Mr. Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, to the League of Nations Assembly, in which he warned Europe of two alternatives, conflict or the maintenance of security and peace through the League of Nations Covenant.

The Berliner Tageblatt says that Mr. Eden's plea for co-operation, with different kinds of Governments, constitutes a service to Europe, but his words, otherwise excellent, lost much of their value by not excepting Moscow, which "sought to bring down other Governments."

The Berliner Lokalanzeiger regrets that Mr. Eden still urges an improvement of the machinery of the League and the conclusion of regional pacts.—Reuter.

GENEVA'S MISGIVINGS

Geneva, Sept. 26.
Mr. Anthony Eden's speech at Geneva is warmly welcomed by the press, but his remark that Article XIX (which deals with the possible necessity of revising treaties) shows that the present state of things cannot be expected to last for an indefinite period, has aroused misgivings, especially among representatives of the Little Entente, some members of which think his declaration will encourage the revisionist aspirations of Hungary.—Reuter.

HUNGARY ENTHUSIASTIC

Budapest, Sept. 26.
The speech of Mr. Anthony Eden to the League Assembly was given prominence on the front pages of the evening newspapers yesterday. It was acclaimed as a milestone in international politics. The Magyar Orszag declares Mr. Eden has laid down very clearly the vital necessity of giving effect to Article XIX of the League Covenant.—Reuter.

Kho Sin-kie Eliminated

GREAT FIGHT WITH ANDRE MERLIN

Paris, Sept. 25.

The International Tennis Championships semi-finals saw the French ace, Andre Merlin, defeat the Chinese star, Kho Sin-kie in the most exciting contest of the tourney.

The Frenchman won in four sets, and having lost the first was forced to fight through fourteen games in both second and third sets. The scores were: 1-6, 8-6, 6-4, 6-4.—Reuter.

Tilden States Perry Turning Professional

Honolulu, Sept. 25.
William Tilden, the American professional tennis master, indicated to-day that he had learned that Fred Perry, England's ace amateur, and possibly the greatest living player, would be turning professional within ten days.

If Perry takes this step, which it has been rumoured a hundred times that he was contemplating, it would make possible a meeting of the Englishman and Tilden in what would certainly be the tennis match of the century.—United Press.

MUNITIONS EXPORTS EXPOSED

POLICE RAIDS IN BELGIAN CITIES
ARRESTS ORDERED

Brussels, Sept. 25.

Searches in Belgium for illicit arms continue to yield startling results.

Twenty thousand hand grenades are reported to have been discovered in a factory in the suburbs of Brussels and a stock of sub-machine guns was found in the premises of a business man in Antwerp, where a raid was also made on the premises of a gunsmith, to which a number of machine guns from Liege had been addressed.

A search in a factory at Tongres, near Liege, revealed that hand grenades were being manufactured there at the rate of five hundred a day, in fulfilment of an order for fifty thousand. Documents found in a portfolio belonging to a Spanish captain are said to have led to this raid.

The police in Brussels searched the premises of a firm which received a contract to supply a foreign country (ostensibly Mexico) with twenty thousand bombs. The examining magistrate at Brussels has ordered the arrest of six persons, including two local Socialist Councilors, in connection with the seizure of allegedly illicit arms in a vessel at Ostend.—Reuter Special.

BARONETCY FOR SIR
PERCY VINCENT

London, Sept. 25.

H.M. the King has conferred a baronetcy on Sir Percy Vincent, Lord Mayor of London. Knightships have been conferred on two Sheriffs, Aldermen Laurie and Waldron. These honours mark the retirement of the recipients from office.—Reuter Special.

ULTIMATUM EXPIRES

ALCAZAR STILL DEFIES GOVERNMENT FORCES

Burgos, Sept. 25.

In the north-west sector, General Mola's ultimatum to Bilbao to surrender unconditionally or expect bombardment, expired to-day, and up to the present no notice has been given by the Government that the ultimatum is being considered.

It is expected an insurgent bombardment will begin immediately.—Reuter Bulletin Service.

BOMBING ATTACKS

With the Rebels on Route to Torrijos, Sept. 25.
Intense aerial bombardments have been in progress all morning against the Leftists' front line, which constitutes the outer defences of Madrid. The Government forces are holding the banks of the Guadarrama River and withstanding the attacks of rebel bombing planes and pursuit craft.

Meanwhile, the possibility of another dynamiting of the Alcazar of Toledo is being discussed, due to the Leftists' belief that it would be suicidal to assault the present Rightist positions there, which are from 15 to 20 feet above the highest Leftist lines.—United Press.

Bombers Beaten Off

Toledo, Sept. 25.

Rebel tri-motor bombing planes heavily bombed the vicinity of Toledo, but apparently did minor damage. Loyalist pursuit ships dispersed the attackers.—United Press.

Fires Warning Shot

Gibraltar, Sept. 25.

A British Naval trawler, anchored off Europe Point Lighthouse, fired a warning shot when the Spanish Government destroyer, Almirante Ferrandiz, attempted to escape from insurgent gunfire from a battery on Carrero Point by sheltering within Gibraltar's three-mile limit.

The warning was immediately obeyed and the destroyer steamed off in the direction of Malaga.—Reuter Bulletin Service.

STRUGGLE IN THE NIGHT

Jerusalem, Sept. 25.

Another fierce engagement between British troops and armed Arabs occurred last night on the Jerusalem-Hebra road, near the camp of the Northumberland Fusiliers, which had only been established a few hours previously.

As the conflict took place in the dark, Arab casualties are not yet known. No British casualties are announced.

Two more troopships, carrying further reinforcements, arrived at Haifa to-day.—Reuter Bulletin Service.

CHINESE DINNER

A LARGE red card arrives. Printed on it in black Chinese characters you read (that is to say, if you are a Chinese and have learned to read):

"The sixth month, the fifteenth day, four-thirty in the afternoon, the humble cups will be cleaned and your honourable presence awaited." And there is another line to say who sent the invitation and at which restaurant the feast will take place.

The table will be round, sometimes covered with a cotton cloth. The eating utensils will consist of a pair of chopsticks, a china of enamel spoon, a small bowl, a little soy bean sauce, and a saucer for each guest.

Then tea is served and the hors d'oeuvres are placed on the table, steaming hot cloths are brought in for each guest to wipe his face and hands.

Ten always precedes and finishes any meal, and to the Chinese tea drinking is a cult in itself.

How to eat melon Seed

THE hors d'oeuvres are placed on the table in little saucers. They may consist of melon seed, which the Chinese expertly open with their front teeth, swallowing the kernel, blowing out the shell; pine nuts; cold Chinese ham, a delicacy which is placed before the guest of honour; and Ming dynasty eggs.

These duck eggs are baked in front of a fire with a coating of mud, wheat chaff, and tea, for five hours. From the result you imagine they have been buried for years.

They serve the wine next. It is served hot in a little, ten-pot and drunk out of very small cups.

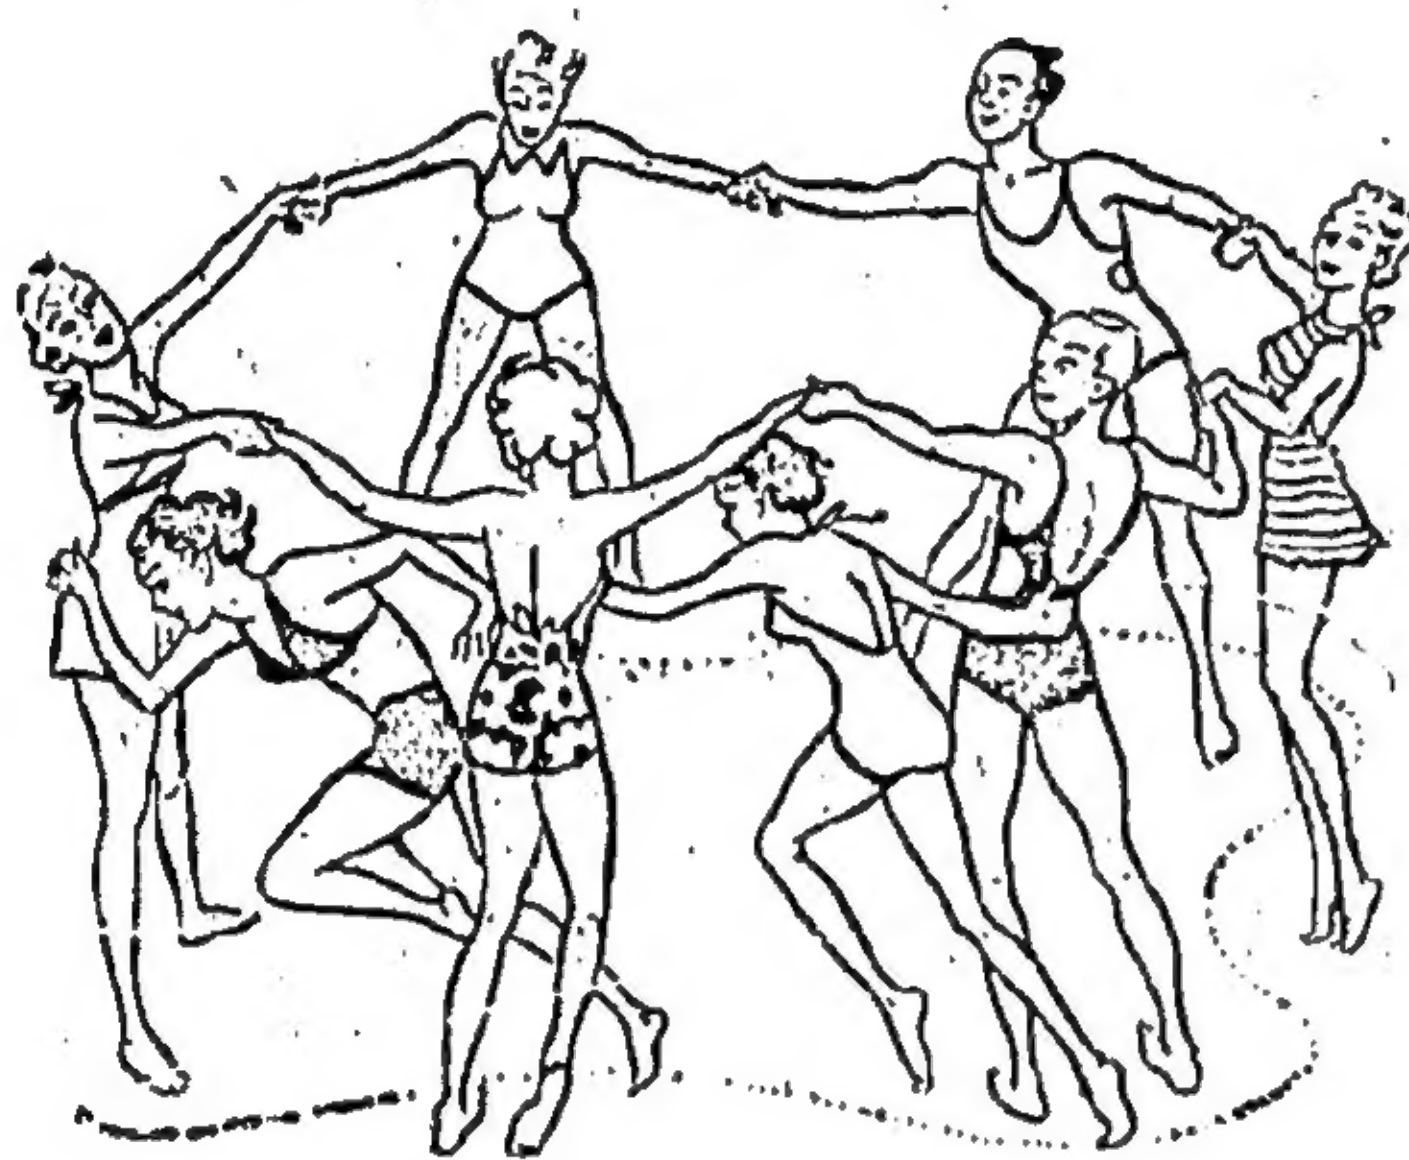

It is very weak, but the Chinese are not as great on drinking as they are on eating. They play little games—one particularly which we call five fingers up—and it is always the loser who has to drink.

If sing-song girls have been ordered they come in now and do their piece before the really serious business of food begins. Sometimes they keep right on through the meal.

Meat courses come First

AFTER about twenty minutes the main courses arrive. The meat and vegetable courses come first, then the soup, and last the fish.

—and chicken may have five disguises in one menu

Repetition of a dish is no fault on a stewer, are roasted golden over a Chinese menu. Chicken may be served in five different ways in the same meal.

The menu I have chosen is not elaborate enough for a formal banquet; there are not enough dishes, they are not rare enough. But I have eaten them myself at one sitting, and, believe me, they will do.

Hunger will teach You

FOUR or five dishes are brought in at once, and the you dip into them with your chopsticks as you please (and if you can). The best way to learn to use chopsticks is to get very hungry and dine with some one who knows how, and watch him gobbling all the best bits for its smoothness.

There is Chicken Velvet, which is made from chicken breasts pressed through a sieve and mixed with stiffly beaten whites of eggs, chicken broth, cauliflower broken into flowers and parboiled before it is added. The seasoning for this consists of chopped ginger root and soy sauce.

Then there are fried duck livers, which are eaten with lavender pepper. These usually show that Peking duck is going to make its appearance soon.

Roasted on a Skewer

FIVE Flavoured Beef is made from lean beef rubbed in salt, half fried in lard, and then simmered until tender with the five flavours: soy sauce, Chinese wine, Ching—which is red kidney bean sauce—a pinch of aniseed, and a pinch of black pepper.

Another chicken dish is called Golden Coin Chicken. Alternate pieces of chicken, ham, and pork, cut to the size of a coin and placed

There are two vegetable dishes at my party. One consists of baby corns-on-the-cob, not more than an inch and a half big, cooked with bamboo shoots in beef broth. The other is made of mushrooms, cooked water-cress, bean curd, water chestnuts, and again bamboo shoots.

To the Chinese the subtlety of these vegetable dishes lies not only in the mixed flavours, but also in the colours and the texture: the elastic, smooth, or crisp effects on the tongue of bamboo shoots, bean shoots, and water chestnut. (And Chicken Velvet is particularly liked watch him gobbling all the best bits for its smoothness.)

Duck brains are Good

THE Duck is barbecued whole, brought in to be exhibited complete with wings, feet, and head, and when it reappears cut up the split head comes too, so that the brains may be enjoyed.

Soups next: Birds' Nest, which is said to be (but rarely is) made from glutinous swallows' nests, very expensive, with pigeons' eggs in it. And a pumpkin and bacon soup into which fried rice cakes are dropped, sizzling. Soup is eaten from the small bowl with appreciative chorus from the guests.

The fish then appears. Sweet and Sour fish is very popular. A two-pound fish is served whole, cleaned, and scored down the sides. It is seasoned, fried in lard.

The sauce—made of vinegar, Chinese wine (or sherry), sugar, rice flour, soy sauce—is poured over the fish as soon as it (the sauce) begins to thicken.

The second fish course may be

BEACH GAMES

they're fun—they'll do you good

IF you haven't the excuse of playing with the children, well then you can tell yourself that, even if the games are silly, they are good for your figure. And, unless you've gone a very long way to find the sun, it won't be hot enough to lie in a daze or sun-bathe the whole day.

You'll feel better for a run around. Think back to the kid parties you used to go to. You played Cat and Mouse, didn't you? The drawing should remind you: players stand in a circle, holding hands. One, in the centre, chooses a nice plump-looking mouse who needs a bit of slimming. Then, running in and out under the linked hands, the cat gives chase.

Once caught, the mouse becomes the cat (a kindly arrangement) and chooses her victim. And so on.

Among ball games, there is one that is particularly good for you if you're round-shouldered or want to improve your chest.

Teams stand in a line facing one another and about six feet apart. Each has a beach ball, which must be thrown from one to the other down the line.

As each player throws the ball to the one standing next her, she must run to the other end of the line. The winning team is the one that is first back in the starting order—with the first player back at the head of the file. For this game, players should stand about a foot apart and throw the ball with their arms high above their heads (that is the part that is good for you).

chopped up eel in a bed of shredded seaweed; it is remarkably good.

Hunger Protest

AND by now the meal is drawing to a close. The tablecloth is strewn with pieces, the guests sigh deeply, relax.

The host protests that his guests have had nothing to eat, are starving; presents them, to assuage their pangs of hunger, with a formal bowl of rice, before they drink their final cup of tea.

After a Chinese meal there is no lingering, no boring small talk to destroy the flavour of the evening. They came to eat. They have eaten. They go.

ROUND ABOUT by The Showman

THERE is no need to worry about the bombs "of English manufacturers" which General de Liano declares were dropped at Tonta on the rebel forces.

The fact that the General had two of these bombs on his desk for inspection by anybody interested shows that they did not explode, and should have given all profound students of High Politics a clue to the truth.

They were, of course, advance samples of the bricks that our dear old Government will drop when it plunges again into international affairs.

I understand that the B.B.C. would have broadcast this information at the end of a news summary, if such an interpolation had not involved the postponement, by one minute, of a talk on hard-bellied eggs.

Out Of The Bag

IT is a pity that the "mysterious animal" of Stratfield Saye, near Basingstoke, has turned out to be a cat. Its name is Fluffy, and it has ten claws more than are usually issued to cats.

Consequently my arrangements to boost the Animal are wasted. I had an alderman who would have suggested it was a light of wild penquins seen through the wrong end of an omnibus: Lady Angela Publicity was going to swear it was her husband striking wasps on all fours; and a former colleague was ready with his pet explanation of everything—

"It's all done by mirrors."

We Can Take It

THE mother of Joe Louis said, after a victory over Sharkey: "Of course, I knew Joe would win. He told me so himself."

This may encourage one or two of the sensational experts who prophesied that he would beat Schmeling, to say that they, too, knew he would beat Sharkey.

Holiday Risks

THEY had to turn back and catch a train.

Having imagined, perhaps, that it could keep pace with them.

Lessons From Splashes

ONE of a series of forthcoming scientific lectures is entitled: "Splashes And What They Teach."

The imagination is mildly stirred. Isn't it? For example:—That whisky can be transformed into a water-spout by a touch of the finger.

And that it is less sudden-like not to leave the soap at the bottom of the bath.

Wags' Corner

ONE Sunday, by mistake, the small boy put a half-crown in the plate instead of his customary penny.

He asked the verger afterwards if he could have it back. "I'm afraid not," was the reply.

So the next Sunday when the plate approached him, the small boy whispered "Season."

Protests Over Parades of Bathing Belles at School

WHERE KING ALFRED WAS EDUCATED
Bathing Pool Floodlit

Sherborne, Sept. 10. Protests are being made about a contest for bathing belles held in historic Sherborne School.

The school is 1,200 years old, and Alfred the Great was educated there.

The contest was held in the school swimming baths, which have been lent to the local council during the summer holidays.

The open-air bathing pool was floodlit, dance music was played from loud-speakers and the ancient Abbey clock chimed 12 overhead as girls, who had cycled in from villages around, paraded round the bath before they dived into the water.

Mr. H. J. Otton, who is running these midnight beauty contests in aid of a local hospital, said to-day, "In the past four years we have raised a lot of money for charity; that is our best reply to the critics who object to such modernity in an historic old spot."

"The bathing beauty contest proved a great success and I shall stage at least another before the school returns."

Rats May Evict Islanders

Rats! They rob the women in their houses And eat all the crops out of the fields. At last the people in a body To another isle are turning.

That is the Pied Piper story of Tristan da Cunha, lonely British isle in the Pacific 2,003 miles from Capetown. The 157 inhabitants may soon be driven by the rat-plague to move to inaccessible isle nearby.

The 62-year-old General Cabanellas, is Chief of the provisional government of the rebels in Spain. He is seen photographed on the balcony of the headquarters of the rebels in Burgos smoking a cigarette. The general rolls his own cigarettes and smokes thirty a day.

TO SCARE HIS WIFE

Norwich, Sept. 15. WALTER SIDNEY WEBB, 23-year-old fruiterer's assistant, was found hanged. At the inquest at Norwich to-day his widow, Lillian Martha Webb, told the story. "I found my husband with a strap round his neck, fixed to the bedpost. I cut him down and went for a walk. I did not realise he was dead. My husband had fastened his necktie round his neck six or seven times before when he wanted to frighten me."

"The first time was before we were married—after a tiff on a bicycle ride. "Once when I could not stop the baby crying he tried to strangle himself. I let him get on with it. He soon undid his necktie."

Verdict: "Death from asphyxia (suffocation) by inadvertently passing a strap tightly round his neck in an effort to scare his wife."

Smuts Blames League Breakdown For Civil War

Durban, Sept. 10. GENERAL SMUTS stated to-day that he looked upon the revolt of the Spanish army in Morocco and civil war in Spain not only as a most dangerous symptom in itself but also as another product of the breakdown of co-operation in the League during the Italo-Abyssinian crisis.

The view was expressed in an interview with the Natal Advertiser. "If France and Britain had stood firm in that crisis and seen the League through the position in the Mediterranean would now be safer for both and the League would have proved itself and have become a real bulwark against revolution and aggression," he said.

FORTUNE FOR "DEAD MAN" Left On Funeral Pyre WANDERER FOR 13 YEARS

Calcutta, Sept. 24. A man was left for dead on a funeral pyre when the mourning relatives were driven away by a fierce storm. He became a wanderer in the Himalayas for 13 years with holy men, suffering from loss of memory, but returned to his former home and recollected that he was a rich man.

These are some of the facts of one of the most remarkable cases in Indian legal history which was concluded to-day at Dacca after a daily hearing since November 27, 1933.

Fifteen hundred witnesses have been examined, including Civil Servants, doctors, barristers, landowners, money-lenders, fishermen, and coolies, and there were 2,000 exhibits.

The plaintiff, a Sanyassi (holy man), claimed to be the second son of the late Raja Bahadur Rajendra Narayan Roy, owner of extensive Bhawal estates in Dacca with an income of £50,000 annually.

In 1909 the son went to Darjeeling for a rest cure and while there was a victim of a murder conspiracy. It is alleged that arsenic was administered to him; he fell into a coma and was presumed to be dead. His body was removed to the cremation ground at midnight, but a heavy storm drove the burial party away before they could light the pyre.

The son was picked up by some Naga Sanyassins, wandered with them for 13 years and returned accidentally to Dacca, to realise who he actually was.

He then claimed his birthright. The defence was that the son referred to actually died and that the present claimant was an impostor.

After hearing the case with exemplary patience Mr. Fauna Lal Bose, a special magistrate, decided in favour of the plaintiff and took three months to write his judgment.

BANISHED RIFF SULTAN ESCAPE REPORT DENIED

Paris, Sept. 15.

A DENIAL is issued by the Colonial Ministry to the report that Abdel Krim, the Riff Sultan, who has been living in banishment since 1926 on the island of Reunion, had escaped.

He was deported with his family to Reunion after being defeated by the combined French and Spanish armies in the Riff.

The French Colonial Ministry states that the report of his escape appears to be an invention, but inquiries are being made by cable.

There are two candidates. Mr. Lakhman sen. and a snake charmer who claims to have brought him back to life two years ago, after he had been buried.

On the night of August 10, 1934, young Lakhman was bitten by a snake. A few hours later the village doctors pronounced him dead. He was buried in the bed of a river near Bijnor.

To-day, two years later, Mr. Lakhman sen. found his son among a group of snake charmers. They recognised each other at once. The charmers claim to have secretly exhumed Master Lakhman's body and charmed him back to life.

As they brought him back to life, they claim him as their son. It is thought that the charmers revived the boy by injecting snake venom to counteract the venom of the snake which had "killed" him.

BROODY HENS FRIGHTENED BY BAGPIPES

Vancouver, B.C. Sept. 15. SCOTTISH music and egg hatching do not mix. A local Italian's demanding damages from his Scottish neighbour on the grounds that every time the latter started playing his bagpipes, all the Italian's brooding hens took flight, flew off their nests and the eggs did not hatch.

Pardoned After 8 Years On Devil's Island

Saint Nazaire, Sept. 15. After serving eight years' imprisonment on Devil's Island for a murder he never committed, a tall, dark haired, handsome man walked down the gangway of the liner De la Salle here to France and freedom, having received a pardon.

He is Charles Lartigue, aged 45, who in November 1928 was condemned to 15 years' penal servitude for the alleged murder of a farmer and his wife, M. and Mme. Domercq, at Belloc, near Pau, Southern France.

Lartigue returns to France to find that his mother and wife are dead. They died from broken hearts after spending all their money trying to secure his retrial.

Lartigue's sister rushed forward to embrace him as he stepped ashore, and he seemed dazed with happiness as he looked round the quayside.

"No words in any language can describe the horrors I have gone through," he said.

"I thought I was doomed to die there. That is the feeling of every one who goes to Devil's Island."

Jack Doyle is "Penitent," So Wife Drops Divorce

Hollywood, Sept. 10.

JUDITH ALLEN, film actress, is not going to sue Jack Doyle, the Irish boxer, for divorce after all.

A fortnight ago she instructed her lawyer to file a suit. Now she says Jack is in a "penitent mood," so she has experienced a "change of heart."

Doyle said a fortnight ago: "It's all my fault. Judith is a marvellous woman."

She said to-day: We are going to look for a site where Jack can build the house I've always wanted.—Reuter.

For who is God save the Lord? and who is a rock save our God? God is my strength and power; and he maketh my way perfect. I will praise thee with my whole heart: before the gods will I sing praise unto thee. I will worship toward thy holy temple, and praise thy name for thy loving kindness and for thy truth: for thou hast magnified thy word above all thy name. Though I walk in the midst of trouble, thou shalt revive me; thou shalt stretch forth thy hand against the wrath of mine enemies, and thy right hand shall save me: thy mercy O Lord, endureth for ever. (II Samuel 22:31-33, Psalm 138: 1, 2, 7, 8.)

The Lesson Sermon will also include the following passages from the Christian Science Textbook "Science and Health with key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy.

"Perfection underlies reality. Without perfection, nothing is wholly real. All things will continue to disappear, until perfection appears and reality is reached. In the midst of imperfection, perfection is seen and acknowledged only by degrees. The ages must slowly work up to perfection. How long it must be before we arrive at the demonstration of scientific being, no man knoweth,—not even 'the Son but the Father'; but the false claim of error continues its delusions until the goal of goodness is assiduously earned and won. God is the creator of man, and the divine Principle of man remaining perfect, the divine idea or reflection, man remains perfect. Man is the expression of God's being. If there was a moment when man did not exist, there was a moment when man did not express God, and consequently a time when Deity was unexpressed—that is, without entity. If man has lost perfection, then he has lost his perfect Principle, the divine Mind. The conception of mortal, erring thought must give way to the ideal of all that is perfect and eternal. Through many generations human beliefs have been attaining diviner conceptions, and the immortal and perfect model of God's creation will finally be seen in the only true conception of being." NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

MARKET DOWNWARD YESTERDAY

New York, Sept. 25.
Swan, Culbertson & Fritz Dow Jones summary of yesterday's market.—The stocks market to-day reacted on the crisis in the French financial situation. Prices declined early in the session, in which the market was buoyed up by the fact that the market weathered the French financial crisis.

Brokers believe that French devaluation has been buying everything they could get their hands on, and that the market will be a good deal more active than it has been for some time.

After studying the culture of the people, he found that the secret of success of the Japanese lay in their unity.

MESSAGE OF PEACE

INTERESTING LECTURE BY THE MAULANA

"Message of Peace" was the subject of an interesting lecture delivered by His Eminence Maulana Mohamed Abdul Aleem Siddiqui at the Mohammedan Cemetery Mosque yesterday.

The speaker began by deploring the small attendance and the absence of leading personalities who, he said, were perhaps frightened away by the fact that the lecture was being held in a cemetery, which was considered only a place for the dead. This should not be the case, he remarked, as every one would die one day. Only people who did not believe in God, but in "mysterious things," were afraid to come to a cemetery.

Continuing, the speaker said that according to the teachings of Islam, and he believed, of Christianity, the body was only a frame for the soul which was simply the command and order of God.

Referring to the subject of his lecture, the Maulana said there could only be peace if the spiritual and moral codes of God were followed. The message of peace was in these codes and no one could find peace unless he followed them.

In this instance, the speaker said that in the old days, without a name, they wandered from place to place in small groups and wherever they went there was a fight. It was only when they followed the teachings of Mohamet and adopted the laws that they found peace and became known as the leaders of Islam.

Every religion in the world, continued the Maulana, had its own spiritual and moral laws, and every person, no matter what their religion, should follow them if they wanted peace.

—Fundamental Principle
The first and fundamental principle of the message was "Love God and we would love you." Human beings should love one another, for it was the law of nature that if one treated another cruelly, he would be dealt with in a similar manner one day.

The speaker then recalled his recent visit to Japan. As soon as he arrived there, he said, he first thing he wanted to find out was what the country had become so powerful and feared by practically every nation in the world. After studying the culture of the people, he found that the secret of success of the Japanese lay in their unity.

Without unity, concluded the speaker, there could not be peace, and in order to have universal peace, the whole world must be united—a fact which was mentioned in the codes.

CINEMA NOTES

Once again the golden voice of Grace Moore rings out from the screen, in Columbia's new musical romance "The King Steps Out", which is now at the King's Theatre and Alhambra Theatres. It is the diva's third picture since her return to the screen in the sensational successful "One Night of Love" in 1934, the other film being "Love Me Forever", which also was well received. On this occasion Miss Moore has for her leading man Franchot Tone, who has grown in a short time into one of the most popular stars on the screen. Tone is seen in the role of Emperor Francis Josef, who woos one daughter of Duke Maximilian—played by Walter Connolly and finally marries another. The other one might safely presume, would be the lovely Miss Moore. Also seen in leading roles are Raymond Walburn, engaging character actor who will be fondly remembered for his drunken politician in "Thanks a Million", his valet in "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" and other characterizations; and Victor Jory, the Oberon in "Midsummer Night's Dream" and leading man in many other pictures. As for Walter Connolly, he has recently been seen prominently in "She Couldn't Take It" and "The Music Goes Round". The music in "The King Steps Out" was written by Fritz Kreisler, who is accepted to be the world's outstanding exponent of the violin and a composer of classical calibre. His famed composition "Capriccio Viennois" is sung in the film by Miss Moore, with lyrics by Dorothy Fields, who also penned the words for the other Kreisler music in the picture. Josef von Sternberg, who last directed "Crime and Punishment", brought "The King Steps Out" to the screen.

"The Garden Murder Case"

Philo Vance falls in love! That is the high spot—or one of them—in "The Garden Murder Case", latest of S. S. Van Dine's delightful series of the super-scientific detective. With Edmund Lowe as Vance, and lovely blonde Virginia Bruce as the object of his affections, the picture is a novel opened yesterday at the Majestic Theatre. With the principal players in a notable cast including Benita Hume, Douglas Walton, Nat Pendleton, Gene Lockhart, H. B. Warner, Kent Smith, Grant Mitchell, Frieda Inescort, Henry B. Walthall, Jessie Ralph, Charles Trowbridge and Etienne Girardot, each ideally suited to his role and each turning in an outstanding performance.

"Call of the Wild"

"Call of the Wild", 20th Century's colourful filmization of Jack London's immortal story of the Yukon Gold Rush, comes to the Oriental Theatre for to-morrow and Monday. A location unit headed by Clark Gable, Loretta Young and Jack O'Keefe, faced danger and starvation in sub-zero Mount Baker, Washington to film this production. Gable and O'Keefe are seen as Thornton and Shorty, two buddies seeking gold in Alaska. They rescue beautiful Claire Blake from wolves and learn that her husband has been lost in the Arctic wastelands. She possesses details regarding a rich "lost claim" and realizing that she is helpless single-handed that girl casts her lot with Thornton and Shorty. After a perilous journey the trio locate the strike, finding it unbelievably rich. Thornton and Claire have fallen hopelessly in love when Thornton's dog Buck finds Claire's husband. Thornton releases Claire and sends the couple off to file claim on the property. Others in the cast are Frank Conroy, Reginald Owen, Sidney Toler and Katherine de Mille.

"The Dark Angel"

Fredric March, Merle Oberon and Herbert Marshall play the three lovers tossed helplessly about by the relentless tides of life in "The Dark Angel", the new Samuel Goldwyn production which begins a three day run at the Star Theatre to-day. Set in a lovely, quiet corner of rural England, the story, which Lillian Hellman and Merle Oberon adapted to the screen from a play by Guy Bolton, reflects the conflicts and triumphs in the life of Kitty Vane, a beautiful English girl who, since childhood, has been loved by one boy, Gerald Shannon, (March), while she loves his cousin, Alan Trent, (Oberon). Months in the trenches bring to Alan the realization of his love for Kitty. Home on leave, he confesses his love and they ecstatically arrange to marry on the morrow. An order cancelling all leaves shatters their dream, however, and they spend their last hours together trying to forget that they may never see each other again. The story proceeds from this point to a powerful emotional climax and, after many vicissitudes, the lovers are reunited to face the future together. Sidney Franklin directed "The Dark Angel" for release through United Artists. The supporting cast is headed by Janet Beecher, John Halliday, Henrietta Cromman, Frieda Inescort, Claude Allister, George Breckston and Cora Sue Collins.

"Old Man Rhythm"

With a talented and zestful cast headed by Charles (Buddy) Rogers romping breezily through the comedy and romance of an entirely novel plot, RKO Radio's "Old Man Rhythm" is providing light, wholly enjoyable entertainment at the Majestic Theatre to-morrow. Its gay yarn is set against a collage background but breaks away from the usual den-or-olma-mater pattern. "Old Man Rhythm" marks the return of Rogers to the screen, the portly, Johnny Roberts, a young college blade. Blindly, he overlooks Edith Warren (Barbara Kent) who really loves him, and loses his head over Miriam Beecher (Grace Bradley), an alluring campus gold-digger. The supporting cast which is composed of ace entertainers from the screen, stage, vaudeville and night clubs, includes Dave Chasen, Eric Blore, Erik Rhodes, Betty Grable, Evelyn Poe, Johnny Mercer, John Arledge, Joy Hodges, Douglas Fowley, Bill Carey, and Sonny Lamont.

The members of the Royal Army Medical Corps Association held a very enjoyable function last night at the occasion of their first dance of the year, held in the ballroom of the Hotel Cecil. The attendance was slightly over 100 couples and before the end of the proceedings the Secretary of the Association announced that in view of the evening being a great success the Association would hold a dance once a month.

SOVIET DECREE TO GLORIFY THE HOME

CURB ON DIVORCES AND BONUSES FOR LARGE FAMILIES TO INCREASE POPULATION IN 30 YEARS
BY 100 MILLION

Moscow, Sept. 18.
The abolition of ten Moscow waiting lines and the lengthening of ten others provided evidence to-day of a trend in Soviet vital statistics which may influence the history of the world.

Elimination of 10 queues of "cohereds" is important enough to a populace accustomed to standing in line to buy nearly all necessities, to hire a taxi, or buy a glass of soda water on a hot day, but its true significance was in the fact that the lines affected were the divorce and birth registration queues in Moscow's 10 Zags bureaus.

These bureaus, where all the city's marriages, births and divorces are registered, provided a significant barometer of the effect of a decree signed June 27 curtailing divorce, encouraging large families and outlawing abortions, for as Moscow leads, the nation follows.

AFFECTS LIFE AND WEALTH

The decree formulated by a selected group of men behind the Kremlin's guarded walls—the Central Executive Committee and the Council of People's Commissars, guided by Joseph Stalin—potentially will affect more human lives and more wealth than the World War.

The war cost 8,335,315 lives directly. Millions more were wounded, and billions in wealth destroyed.

The scratching of a pen in the Kremlin has the possibility of causing directly the creation of 100,000,000 new human lives in little over a quarter of a century, and through use of this population to develop Russia's vast area and natural resources the production of untold wealth.

Even under the previous birth rate Soviet population would increase from 170,000,000 to 300,000,000 in 1968, the end of the eighth five-year plan. Now it may reach 400,000,000—some estimates range to 500,000,000.

DIVORCES DROP SHARPLY

The first tangible result of the decree was a 90 per cent reduction of divorces in Moscow during the first 20 days. During the first 20 days of June there were 2,214 divorces in Moscow.

The bureau at No. 1 Khrushovskiy Pereulok consists of an entrance hall and two offices on the ground floor. It operates seven days a week and is perpetually crowded. It is stuffy and hot in summer and stuffy in winter. Lines form before desks at which marriages and children are registered. Red bunting and window flower pots mitigate its drabness.

TYPICAL DAY OBSERVED

During one hour in the middle of the afternoon at this Zags bureau there were 20 births and 12 marriages registered as against two divorces.

Constantine Stepanov, 49-year-old construction foreman, came in to register his seventh child. He was clean shaven, his white blouse, girdled with a leather belt, was dusty and wrinkled from work. He wiped the perspiration from his face as he waited in line.

"Comrade," he said when the registration had been completed, "what is this I hear about being paid 2,000 roubles for the seventh child?"

"Yes, that is right," answered the clerk. "I was waiting to tell you about it. Bring in the certificates for the other children."

MOTHER OF SEVEN AT 42

His lips opened in a delighted smile.

"Good, Mashal!" he cried as he turned to elbow his way out. Mashal, the records showed, was 42 years old and the mother of the seven.

This premium feature for large families alone is expected to result in a considerable increase in births, particularly in the rural districts, where large families are common. Even in metropolitan Moscow numerous applications have been made.

Parents will receive an annual premium of 2,000 roubles each for the seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth children until each child is 5 years old. An eleventh child and subsequent offspring each will be worth 5,000 roubles at birth and 3,000 roubles yearly for four more years. This will provide a large income for peasant families who seldom see as much as 2,000 roubles cash in a year.

DIVORCES MORE EXPENSIVE

The most potent factors in reducing divorce were the requirement that both parties must appear in the proceedings and an increase in cost ranging as high as 3,000 per cent. Previously either husband or wife could obtain a divorce by paying three roubles and mailing a postcard to the other spouse. Now both must appear and the cost has been increased to 50 roubles for the first divorce, 150 for the second and 300 for the third and subsequent.

The divorce now must be entered in the passports of the parties, and where there are children heavy alimony obligations are placed upon the husband. He must pay one-fourth of his income for the support of one child, one-third for two and 50 per cent for three or more, with a penalty of two years in prison for evasion.

Great social pressure has been brought to bear in education, the press, radio, social organizations and trade unions to discourage divorce, encourage marriage and large families.

Factors intended to raise the birth rate, in addition to premium offers, are stress on medical care of mothers, painless childbirth and material facilities both for mothers and children.

112 DAYS LEAVE GRANTED

Each mother receives 56 days leave before and 56 days after childbirth with full pay and easier conditions without reduction of pay. She receives 45 roubles to purchase articles for infant care and 10 roubles a month during nursing.

To care for the expected increase in population the government will spend over and above local budgets during 1936 1,481,300,000 roubles on maternity homes, midwife stations, nurseries, dairies, kitchens, kindergartens, and 692,000,000 roubles for the construction and development of the network of these institutions, increasing the general amount assigned in 1936 to 2,174,100,000 roubles as compared with 875,000,000 in 1935.

The programme calls for an increase of 800,000 nursery beds for children in cities, state farms, workers' settlements and on the railways by the end of 1938, and an increase in the number of beds in permanent nurseries by 500,000 and in seasonal nurseries by 4,000,000 beds.

The network of kindergartens will be tripled by 1938, bringing accommodations for 2,400,000 additional children. Playgrounds will be provided for 10,700,000 children, and thousands of teachers, nurses, midwives and physicians trained.

BIG AIR RACE

PARIS TO FAR EAST All-Nations Contest

Paris, Sept. 20.

WHAT is described as the longest and most arduous race in the history of aviation is to be staged over a 13,600-miles course from Paris to Saigon, in French Indo-China, on October 25.

The Aero Club of France and the Aero Club of Indo-China are combining in organising the race.

It is hoped that British, American, French, German, and Italian pilots will take part.

An official in connection with the organisation of the flight said: "Our plans are not yet completed, but at present the prize money may be put at between £15,000 and £16,000."

"The route will be Paris, Baghdad, Allahabad, Saigon, returning via Allahabad, Baghdad, Cairo, and Paris."

CONTROL POINTS
"The first hop of the flight and the most gruelling will be 2,400 miles from Paris to Baghdad. The second from Baghdad to Allahabad, is another 2,300 miles, and the third is nearly 2,000 miles."

"On the return trip the flyers will hop the nearly 800 miles from Baghdad to Cairo, and then another 2,000 from Cairo to Paris."

"The pilots will have to stop at pre-arranged control points. Petrol tanks will be scaled at Paris, Baghdad and Allahabad by representatives of the Aero Club of France, and officials will be stationed along the route as observers."

"Each plane will carry recording apparatus which will be checked over by officials after the contest. Not more than two flyers will be allowed in each plane, but solo entrants will be permitted."

The Church In The Philippines

Manila, Sept. 20.

Continued complete separation of church and state must be a basic principle in the foundations of the new Philippines government, President Manuel Quezon said in his first public utterance on the subject since his inauguration as head of the Commonwealth, November 15, 1935.

Quezon, president of the only Christian nation in the Far East, reminded that he was a Catholic and former 33rd degree Mason and added that "no authority of any Church has any right to interfere with the affairs of the government."

"As head of the state, I can have no more to do with the Catholic Church than I can with the Protestant denomination, the Asilpayan (Philippine Independent Church), the Mohammedan, or any other religious organization or sect in the Philippines."

Quezon defined his policy during a banquet at Malacanang Palace, the presidential residence, in honour of His Grace, Michael J. O'Doherty, Archbishop of Manila.—United Press.

20 CORPSES IN RESERVOIR

Gruesome Discovery In Singapore

POLICE TO REVEAL MYSTERY OF THE MOUNDS

Three Arrests Already

Singapore, Sept. 10.
AN amazing state of affairs, possibly unprecedented in any city in the world, has been discovered at the McRitchie Reservoir, at Thomson Road, Singapore.

The discovery, which is as gruesome as it is unbelievable, was made by the syce employed by Mr. W. Murnane, the Municipal Water Engineer, who following up suspicions which he had formed five weeks ago definitely established the fact that the catchment area which drains into the reservoir has been used for some time past—probably months—as an unauthorised burial ground.

It is believed that anything from 15 to 20 bodies, mostly of children, have been interred there. Serious as it is, the situation would have been worse had the reservoir been in use. Luckily, the Pontian Kechil reservoir is sufficient to supply all Singapore's needs at the moment.

HAD it been otherwise, the danger of contaminated water finding its way into the reservoir and the possibility of a defect in the filtration system might have let loose on Singapore one of the most terrible scourges in its history.

Following the discovery, preliminary investigations were made, as a result of which about 20 mounds of earth—some newly turned—were found. There is every reason to believe that beneath each is a coffin containing a corpse.

AN EERIE SCENE
An eerie scene will be enacted in the catchment area soon after dawn to-day, when the police start investigating the mounds and disintering probably coffins and bodies.

It seems that the catchment area, which is about 200 yards away from the Hyiam cemetery at the fifth milestone, Thomson Road, has been used as an unauthorised burial ground in order that unscrupulous burial contractors may pocket the burial fees given them by poor people who have entrusted them with the task of taking their dead to a proper burial.

The usual procedure, it is understood, is for burial contractors to take the death certificate issued by the Registrar of Births and Deaths and the required fee, to the caretaker of the burial ground. However, by disposing of bodies in unauthorised areas and tearing up the certificates the contractors thus make extra money.

CARRIED A COFFIN
As a result of inquiries throughout last week, a Chinese burial contractor and two of his coolies were arrested.

It is one of these coolies, it is alleged, whose movements finally confirmed the suspicions of Mr. Murnane's syce, Ahmat bin Haji Drua, who has been employed with him for 11 years.

About half-past six one Tuesday evening, Ahmat was walking with a friend, a gardener employed in the reservoir, along the road which skirts the catchment area when he saw in front of him a Chinese carrying a small coffin, obviously that of a child, and a changkol.

The man was going toward the cemetery. He was seen to suddenly turn into the jungle of the catchment area.

Ahmat continued walking but suddenly heard the sound of a changkol digging the ground.

Ahmat and his friend decided to investigate and as they walked through the underbrush, the sound of digging stopped.

The Chinese, it is said, began running away but was eventually caught after a short chase. The two Malays found the coffin which the man had been carrying lying beside a newly-dug hole.

POLICE INFORMED
The Chinese was taken before Mr.
Murnane who then went to the scene.
As a result of his brief inspection he informed the police.

On the slopes of a hillock about 20 yards away from a section of the reservoir were found between 15 to 20 mounds, some of them freshly turned and not yet covered by fallen leaves.

It is understood that when the earth of one mound was scooped away the face of a coffin was exposed, which leads to the belief that under each of the other mounds lay coffins with their gruesome contents.

BURIAL "RACKET" Further investigation is alleged to have revealed the existence of a "racket" in which its burial contractors pocket burial fees ranging from 40 cents to $1.50.

Tremendous difficulties will arise in the investigations which will follow the disinterment of the contents of the mounds.

After each unauthorised burial, it is alleged, the death certificates were destroyed—thus also destroying the identity of the corpse and the nature of its death.

Each body unearthed will therefore, have to be identified, if possible, while a post mortem will also have to be held.

The Singapore Coroner, Mr.
W. G. Porter, has, it is understood, given the police authority "to explore" the catchment area. The exhumations will take place this morning.

NO DANGER
When questioned last night on any possible danger from the use of the catchment area as a burial ground, an officer of the Municipal Water Department, who lives at McRitchie Reservoir, said: "There is no danger from the point of view of the public."
"The McRitchie Reservoir is not in use at the present time, but it may be brought back into use in the immediate future."

"However, had the reservoir been in use and had our filtration system broken down, it might have meant an epidemic of water-borne diseases throughout the town."

SYCE'S SUSPICIONS
Ahmat, the driver, had his suspicions raised about five weeks ago, but did not communicate them to anybody—not even to Mr. Murnane, his employer.

Ahmat decided to follow up his suspicions and continually—whenever possible—kept the catchment area under observation.

There is a large staff of additional police constables, gardeners, mandors and assistants employed at the reservoir, the catchment area of which extends over 9,000 acres.

BIG 'PLANES FOR JAPAN

BETTERMENT OF SERVICE FOR 1940 CONSIDERED

Tokyo, Sept. 15.
AILINERS with a capacity of 20 will be used on the main Japanese lines by 1940, to facilitate travel by visitors attending the Olympic Games, the Japan Air Transport Company has announced.
In co-operation with foreign networks, the firm said it intended to shorten the time required to reach Tokyo from London, Paris and Berlin to one week. It also intends to inaugurate a one-day Dairen-to-Tokyo service with a spur linking Changchun with the route.

Four regular flights will be carried out between Tokyo and Osaka, while passengers will find good accom-

Look what film may cause

For clean, sound teeth...
Remove FILM this way

The fate of your teeth may rest on what you do to remove film! Don't risk ineffective methods when film may lead to such serious consequences. And don't trust precious tooth enamel to any but a special film-removing dentifrice.

21 years ago a group of men discovered a scientific fact—that film should be removed if teeth are to be kept clean and sound, if gums are to remain healthy. A special formula was devised. Since then it has been constantly improved with one thought in mind: to remove film safely.

Today Pepsodent is known as the "special film-removing tooth paste." It is unexcelled in the way it removes the film that glues decay germs to teeth. Millions know how it polishes teeth to natural brilliance. And it does these things safely. For Pepsodent contains no grit, nothing that might harm or injure tooth enamel.

For whiter, brighter teeth, sound and healthy teeth, use Pepsodent, the "special film-removing tooth paste."

THE RAILWAY

For very many years after its construction, the Kowloon-Canton Railway was a burden to the finances of the Colony, due, in the first place, to the heavy capital expenditure, and, secondly, to failure to secure any profit on working. In recent years, however, the railway has become a most useful source of revenue, more than paying its way. The outlook for the coming year is not as good as it was, due to a variety of circumstances. Being in the main a passenger-carrying service, the railway's income is naturally affected by the economic position of the people it serves, and in this connection it is only to be expected that the present depression should be reflected in less traffic. But there are additional factors to be kept in mind. One of these is that the working agreement reached two years ago results in Hongkong securing a smaller percentage on through traffic than formerly, whilst income is likely to be adversely affected during the coming year as a consequence of the shutting down of the gambling establishments at Shumehun and by reason of the expectation that fewer trains of the Chinese section will be hauled by British engines. Notwithstanding these factors, the Budget figures show that the railway is likely to make a profit on working of well over three lakhs of dollars. When the line was originally built, it proved one of the most costly pieces of railway construction, in proportion to its length, to be recorded almost anywhere. The heavy tunnelling and bridging was one of the circumstances to account for this. Since then, there have been yearly additions to the capital account, which now stands at over twenty million dollars. The deficits on the early working of the railway have also been a heavy charge on the undertaking, and these are still far from having been wiped out. None the less, the prospects for the railway may be looked upon as promising, if a long view is taken of the situation. In this connection, sight must not be lost of the eventual benefits which will accrue when the line is linked up with the Canton-Hankow system, as it will be in the not far distant future. Latterly, there has been evident a marked spirit of enterprise in the management of the line, with ample evidence of a determination to popularise railway travel. This is all to the good, and, once the general depression is lifted and the new link with China's trunk system forged, it will doubtless be found that our little railway will become an asset of distinct value to the Colony and contribute increasingly to its revenue.

THE Battalion has a magnificent reputation, dating from its origin in 1715, and has many battle honours to its credit. In the Great War it especially distinguished itself in operations in the Western Front and against the Turks.

During the four years of the campaign, in addition to honours awarded to officers, two men won Victoria Crosses and 58 distinguished conduct medals, whilst 18 commissions in the Regiment were given from the ranks of the Battalion.

The origin of the Battalion is most interesting. Among the noblemen who lost their titles and estates because they joined the Jacobite Rebellion of 1715 was the 5th Earl of Seaforth. The son of this Peer, however, was permitted to repurchase the estate from the Crown, and in 1771 the grandson was advanced to the dignity of "Earl of Seaforth," the title which had long been enjoyed by his ancestors.

To show his gratitude for the restoration of his title, the Earl offered to raise a regiment. This offer was accepted, and the Regiment was embodied at Elgin in May, 1778, placed on the establishment of the Regular Army under the designation of "Seaforth's Highlanders," and numbered the 78th Regiment.

In 1786, owing to the reduction of several other corps, the Regiment was renumbered 72nd, the old corps number of 78th being, by a coincidence, allotted to the present 2nd Battalion of the Seaforth Highlanders.

THE badges and devices worn by the Battalion are interesting in origin. These include the cipher "L" and Coronet of H.R.H. the Duke of York and Albany, a distinction granted to the 1st Battalion (then the 72nd Highlanders) in 1824. Frederick Duke of York and Albany was a brother of King George IV.

On the crest is the Stag's Head (Cabar Feidh), with the motto "Cuidich'N Righ" ("Help the King"). The crest and motto were granted to Colin Fitzgerald, founder of the Mackenzie family, in the year 1265 by King Alexander III of Scotland, whose life he saved from the fury of a hunted stag.

The motto "Tulloch Ard" is found on officers' full dress sword-belts. This is an old War Cry of the Clan Mackenzie (whose tartan the Battalion wears) and means "High Hillock"—the allusion is to the Hill which acted as the place of Assembly and Council of the Clan.

The cipher "L", with a coronet, is borne on the cap badge worn by officers and warrant officers. This is the cipher of Leopold, Duke of Albany, who was Colonel of the Regiment, and was adopted as part of the cap badge at the request of Queen Victoria.

It will be something of a new experience for Hongkong to have a kilted battalion once more in its midst. The last unit thus uniformed was the 2nd Battalion of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, which came here in 1930 and was later transferred to Shanghai when the Sino-Japanese troubles broke out.

It is of interest, in this connection, to recall that the Regiment received a most serious blow in 1809, when an order was issued by King George III directing it to discontinue wearing the Highland costume. Thus the nationality of the Regiment was disowned. The Mackenzie tartan kilt and yellow facings of the doublet were taken away, and the 72nd were made to wear the white facings and pantaloons of the Line, which it continued to do for 14 years.

On Christmas Day, 1823, a welcome order was received that King George IV had been pleased "to approve of the 72nd Regiment again becoming a Highland Regiment, with this difference only, that the officers and men shall wear trews instead of kilts."

In 1881, the 72nd and the 78th Highlanders—two regiments which have a common origin—were united, the former becoming the 1st Battalion and the latter the 2nd Battalion, Seaforth Highlanders. It was only in 1920 that the word "The" was officially inserted on front of the word "Seaforth" as part of the regimental title. On its return home from foreign service in 1882, the 1st Battalion took the kilt into wear again for the first time since 1809. From this date, the uniform of the two battalions has been identical.

COMING to the service record of the Battalion, it is of interest of note that on its first voyage overseas it took over ten months to reach India! The trip was a disastrous one. The Colonel died before St. Helena was reached, and by the time the Battalion disembarked at Madras 247 men had died of scurvy and only 369 could carry arms.

On one occasion, the Regiment actually took part in a sea battle. This was in 1782, when Admiral Sir Edward Hughes engaged in three very sanguinary fights with the French fleet under Admiral Suffren. In one of these engagements, the regiment was represented by detachments who acted as marines. The battle lasted all day, and the French were defeated with the loss of 1,088 killed and wounded. British losses were 334 killed and wounded, including two officers of the Seaforths.

The Battalion also saw service in many subsequent campaigns, including the Crimean War, the Indian Mutiny, at Tel-el-Kebir in 1882, and at Omdurman in 1898.

IN the Great War, during an attempt to drive the enemy from the Aubers Ridge, on May 9, 1915, the Seaforths (both the 1st and 4th Battalions) suffered between 450 and 500 casualties in three-quarters of an hour.

In January, 1916, the Battalion took an active part in attacks on the Turks at Sheikh Saud. The outstanding feature of these attacks was the flat, coverless terrain, which had to be crossed to reach the enemy's entrenched positions. The Battalion's losses were so heavy that they could at this time barely muster 100 rifles for duty, and in one engagement they lost 20 officers and 60 per cent. of men in killed and wounded.

Eventually, after most arduous struggles, the Battalion took part in the entry into Baghdad on March 11, 1917. This followed the capturing of three lines of Turkish trenches in the Sanniyat position, in which numerous instances of gallantry were recorded, the honours for which included a Victoria Cross for Sergeant Steele.

After the battle, General Maude, the Commander-in-Chief in Mesopotamia, a man as a rule sparing of laudatory remarks, in a Special Order of the Day, said: "The brilliant tenacity of the Seaforths deserves special mention."

And now the Battalion is once again on active service in Palestine, winning fresh honour and glory. Hongkong will indeed be glad to welcome the Seaforths when they arrive to take their place among the defence forces of the Colony.

Jerez de la Frontera

IN ALL the turmoil of Spanish civil war Jerez, the cradle of sherry, is undisturbed.

Her earliest trading days with us are uncertain, but Benito de Cardenas has an entry in his diary of 1483: "No English or Breton ships have arrived this year to trade in consequence of the war with the Biscayans." Then, the sneaked Cadiz and return home, his ships low in the water so laden were they with "sacked" with Elizabethan literature bristles with reference to Sack, none perhaps better known than Falstaff's: "If I had a thousand sonnets, the first principle I would teach them should be to forswear thine Potations, and to addict themselves to Sack."

There was, too, that unbalanced son of Henry VIII, whose wife, the daughter of Ferdinand and Isabella, complained without stint of the quality of the wine he provided her with during the period he was suing her for divorce. He bought it cheap, perhaps, from one of those rogues Villon sings of so bitterly:

"Prince, may God curse their vitals is my prayer:
And may they burst with venom
all, in fine,
These traitorous thieves, accursed and unfair,
The vintners who put water in our wine."

This city of white walls shimmering in brilliant sunshine has known many troubles. Down the long centuries, invasion and earthquake, plague and famine have tried Jerez, only to leave it stately and serene, gazing across rolling Andalusia and musing on its stormy past. Phoenicians, Romans, Moors and Goths have fought for and have occupied the city, but one and all, friend and foe, have paid tribute to its vines.

These went through anxious times in 900 when Al-Hakim II. was ordered by religious fanatics to uproot the vines, and only at the last moment did sinner counsels prevail. It was Don Alfonso, El Sabio who did much to extend the viticulture when he granted to "Los Caballeros de Feudo" six acres each of vines to tend and cultivate, and six to plant with vines.

Now, with warfare raging, the vineyards stand peaceful and undamaged. Many tragic pages of history will be filled before the vintage of 1937. But when September comes one feels that friend and foe may lay down their arms and crowd to the vineyards, for every man in the town has a stake in the precious liquid. Life and death may engender more violent emotions for a while, but they are evanescent in comparison with La Vendimia.

Thriller Is Picked As New A. D. C. Show

BY "FIRST NIGHT"

EMLYN WILLIAMS' highly-successful psycho-thriller "Night Must Fall" has been decided upon by Amateur Dramatic Society as first of three plays promised for forthcoming season.

It will be produced at China Fleet Club Theatre on November 4, 5, 6, 7.

Cast not yet definitely settled, but birdie whispers that Don MacAlister will take murderer's role so successfully played by author in lengthy Duchess Theatre (London) season.

E. G. Smith-Wright is producing and starts rehearsals on Monday. "Night Must Fall" run at Duchess Theatre for over a year, was one of big hits of 1935-36. Author-actor Emlyn Williams, who played lead, is known to Hongkongites for brilliant performances in film "Friday the Thirteenth", in which he played role of blackmailer, role that made him famous on stage. He was also the murderer in screen adaptation of Edgar Wallace's "Case of the Frightened Lady." Williams was born in 1905, received education at County School, Holywell and at Christ Church, Oxford. His other plays are "A Murder Has Been Arranged," "Glamour," "Full Moon," "Vigil," "Vessels Departing," "Spring 1900," "Script of 'Night Must Fall' is in 'Famous Plays of 1935' (Gollancz).

If you go to Gripas Saturday night next dressed in monkey jacket you won't be chucked out on your ear, despite advertisements, slickers, cards which state that evening dress is compulsory for Gala opening of Roof Garden.

Caption was made in error. What Advertising Manager meant was that "Dinner Dress is compulsory," so nothing short of shorts or slacks will be infra dig. Bob and Bertie Hellman arrived from North yesterday, commenced double-plane rehearsals for big night, when they will appear in conjunction with popular Pat Sykes, J. A. Andrew. Young Viennese couple have been holidaying in Japan after 18 months of Shanghai's hectic life. Popular with many Hongkongites especially members of the German, Dutch, Swiss, French and Austrian communities, they are assured of hearty hand-claps before they even open lid of plumes on Saturday night next week.

Incidentally, if ZBW could wrangle permission, they would be able to secure in Bob and Bertie (short for Berthall) two articles who have made enviable reputation as radio broadcasters in nearly every country in Europe. Zeppen, Eindhoven, Vienna are three, short-wave stations that have carried their music around the world.

THIS Page unhesitatingly recommends Max Malini's forthcoming show (Gloucester 8 p.m. Wednesday, Thursday) as best of its kind ever seen in Hongkong. If readers, accepting this Page's recommendation, do not think they have received their $3 worth of fun and amusement at Malini's show, "First Night" is prepared to emulate one of the King-Clan's feats by swallowing one (1) felt hat, new.

To Hongkong old-timers who have regularly visited Malini's shows during the past 25 years, no recommendation is needed.

WHAT is the difference between the Blues and a slow fox-trot? Answer will be supplied by Miss Pat Sykes and Jim Andrew, popular demonstrators of modern ballroom tershiore at the Hongkong Hotel tonight and if you have ideas about entering the Colony dancing championships next week, advise you to slip along and take note.

Andrew says slow F.T. is going to be severest test for competitors, and dancers will agree; smooth rhythm essential, but how to obtain it is question.

After last week's triumph, anticipated Gripas will not be big enough to hold all who will want to see this fine couple in action. They assure me they are going to pull out their best dances to-night, and that's saying about all you can for ballroom dancing.

FLASH: Anna May Wong expects to arrive in Hongkong next week, will stay with sister for few days before proceeding to Europe, where she is booked to make French film. Holiday in North has been top-notch, she avers.

"TELEGRAPH" advertising showed its pulling-power this month in public response to Gloucester Hotel's adverts of forthcoming Gala opening of renovated top-floor Ballroom. Week after initial advertisement appeared, Gloucester put out "Full House" sign, announces so many disappointed patrons that they've decided to repeat Gala three days later. Queenie and the Hawaiian Troubadours, plus Cassack Dance Band innovation, are big attractions.

BOB AND BERTIE

Best Screen Session Is Starting Soon

BY "FIRST NIGHT"

FOR October, November, Hongkong's three first release houses have the most imposing line-up of first-class pictures in the history of the cinema.

With one of these films—"The Great Ziegfeld"—you are going to be asked to sit in either the King's or Alhambra for three hours. It is one of the longest films ever released.

Another—"Things to Come"—will take 2½ hours to watch. It is hailed as the best film to come of a British studio.

Most of the big pictures for October, November will be played simultaneously at the Alhambra and either the King's or Queen's.

"Poor Little Rich Girl" (Shirley Temple) will open October programmes at both King's and Alhambra. Queen's and Alhambra will show all-Technicolor "Dancing Pirates" about mid-October. This will be followed at Alhambra and King's by "Under Two Flags" (Ronald Colman).

At end of October Alhambra and Queen's will simultaneously screen Shakespeare's "As You Like It", with Elisabeth Bergner playing Rosalind. London newspapers are raving about previews, class Bergner's performance as best in her career.

"Mary of Scotland" will open November programmes for Queen's and Alhambra. This features Fredric March and Kathleen Hepburn. It will be followed by "The Great Ziegfeld" (King's, Alhambra) and "Big Broadcast of 1937" (Queen's and Alhambra).

December programmes will open at Queen's and Alhambra with "Swing Time", Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire's new top-notchers. Additionally, the three first-run theatres are screening exclusive films.

Queen's will shortly show "Bride Walks Out", tentatively fixed October 13-14 for re-screening of popular "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town". King's has booked London Films' famed "Ghost Goes West" to follow "Suzy", with "Things to Come" scheduled for early October. Other exclusives to King's scheduled for October release are "Further Adventures of Tarzan", "La Vie Parisienne".

BRITISH filmmakers are falling into evil Hollywood habit of boosting bunk and letting top-notch pictures go through without lot of publicity or advertising.

Such an instance occurred this week when "White Parents Sleep" came to King's. Because pressmen did not see film until actually screened, there was no publicity, except studio puffs, few people saw one of the most delightful comedies to come out of B & D studios.

Not name of this film down in your note-book for second screening, and make a date to see it. Hongkong's A.D.C. could do wonders with material in script if they decided to make this refined, colonel's-navy-and-Guards-sons escapade a plot one of their three 1936-37 productions.

JUST before his departure for Cochin-China on Wednesday, Josef von Sternberg, famed Hollywood director ambling around the world, revealed to me that he would possibly turn his attentions to British pictures when he arrives in Europe next year.

"I'm not hurrying my holiday, and won't reach Europe for some time," he said. "However, my good friend Alexander Korda and I have been corresponding, and there is a possibility that I may direct a picture or two in London before I return to Hollywood."

It is noteworthy that Marlene Dietrich, whose name rocketed to stardom under von Sternberg's able direction, is making a film for Alexander Korda. Possibility is (although von Sternberg wouldn't admit it) that he will direct a Dietrich picture for London films.

Von Sternberg is full of enthusiasm for Hongkong, but deprecates the lack of publicity.

"What your country needs is one or two good Hollywood publicity agents," were his parting words.

CAPE D'AGUIAR'S new 3½-kilowatt short-wave, which will carry "Voice of Hongkong" to every corner of the world, is already on the air. Test transmissions have been carried out for past week on 19 metres, reports have been received from many outside centres, telling of greatly improved reception, perfect modulation.

New transmitter, installed on recommendation of recent Trade Commission, is for express purpose of touristically boosting Hongkong to outside world. Transmissions will be duplicates of present ZBW programmes, which indicates that some peeping-up will be needed at ZBW if outside listeners are to maintain ZCK as one of their favourites once novelty has worn off.

PHILHARMONIC CAST IS LINED UP FOR MAID OF THE MOUNTAINS

PENDING return of Producer Rev. Cyril Brown from Japan, Philharmonic are keeping mum about cast for "Maid of the Mountains," but little dickie-bird has whispered what will be probable constitution.

Not published below is subject to alteration and "First Night" doesn't vouch for its accuracy. However, dickie-bird reveals that it's cast at present lined up:

FILMS Week-End Of Good Pictures

OUTSTANDING interest for fans in "Suzy" is that Jean Harlow is blonde again and commits bigamy. Quite apart from these obvious excitements there is a little of everything, packed into ninety minutes here that the casual cinema-goer can ask for.

This is one of the old type of melodramas where a lot happens and a great number of loose threads are to be gathered up in an exciting finale.

Harlow is an American chorus-girl down on her knees, who appears in London but with two great ambitions, "to become a great actor like Hamlet" and to introduce new blood into the English aristocracy. She abandons both to marry French actor Tone, a young Irish inventor.

A beautiful, German, spy shoots him. Harlow flies to Paris and marries Cary Grant, a philandering aviation hero, whose exploits make Richthofen look like an amateur in a Flying Flea.

The spy turns up again. So does French actor Tone. Spectacular deaths of the two less satisfactory characters paves the way to a "Bengal Lancer" ending with the medal pinned to Cary Grant's airplane and the German air force raining floral tributes from the sky.

It is all very satisfactory.

Rhythm on the Range

—Alhambra, To-morrow.

WELL, doggone it, if it ain't Bud Bing Crosby, the Spokane Scorpion, heading the cowboys back into town.

Bing was born in Spokane, near Washington. The nearest he ever got to a range was probably in his mother's kitchen, but after singing the praises of round-ups, wagon wheels, and old faithfuls for so many years, it is only right that they should have given him place of honour in Hollywood's present stampede to "glorify Yippee."

And it is the band ride that Bing has had for many tuncful June moons.

His success in this part has already got every radio tenor in America begging nightly for his boots and saddle.

It is a rollicking happy-go-lucky affair of an heiress who stows away on a cattle train and falls in with a cowhand returning from a Madison-square Garden rodeo with the object of his affections—a two-ton Hereford bull.

Four new screen personalities add greatly to the entertainment. Frances Farmer, ex-university graduate, waitress, usherette, beauty-prize winner and dramatic coach, seems to me to have everything a coming star should have and a little besides.

Bob Burns, a cowboy with a Will Rogers wit, a Ned Sparks delivery, and an instrument of his own invention called a bazooka, comes from among the radio topnotchers.

His team-mate is Martha Raye, a bolsterous young woman with an indiarubber face and a high-pressure manner, who graduates from night clubs where she was known as the "Queen of Swing." As a comedy team they are star material.

There are plenty more cowboys scheduled to ride into town during the next few months, but I shall be surprised if any provide more all-round entertainment than Crosby and the boys and girls from the Fryling Pan Ranch.

Most of "Maid of the Mountains" players, however, are old Philharmonicans. W. C. Schnabel played Captain Grassmere in "A Country Girl", and in some play H. M. Keown played Douglas Verity. R. M. Keown was a Pirate King in 1926 and a Captain in 1927. Both Jack Grenham and Anne Winter made local Philharmonic debuts in "A Country Girl", and gave performances that brought plenty of deserved kudos.

"Maid of the Mountains" will be produced at Queen's Theatre, December 16, 17, 18, 19, with Matinee on last day.

SENSE and NONSENSE

LOOKING bronzed and busy, Uncle Eddie has arrived back at the office to find a pile of bills, a stack of old newspapers, two shroffs and an Editor awaiting him. He travelled from Canton in the Taipei Belle under the name of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. As soon as he reached Kowloon he changed his name to Siamei Kagawari and, disguised as a Japanese spy, passed the expectant crowd of sightseers, reporters, and photographers almost unnoticed. In order to put the reporters further off the scent, he boarded the Star Ferry for Hongkong-side, got off, caught a ricksha to the Hongkong Hotel, and there asked in a loud voice to be directed to the "Daher ship's berth in Kailoon."

But as nobody took the slightest notice he changed his name to Edward Kelly and came to the office.

It was while he was sitting on the roof of the Shanzen bridge, a fishing line tied to his big toe, and as a British cad (complete with fake school tie), and discussing the theory of relativity with the old hawker who sells cigarettes at $1.50 a tin, that Eddie received a telegram from his office which said: "Are you coming back to work this week?"

Without a moment's hesitation Mr. Kelly wired back, "No," and went on to explain to the hawker how bent light upsets all the notions of time and space accepted by scientists.

Whereupon the elderly woman, who had been listening politely to the discussion, suddenly roared with laughter, and asked Mr. Kelly if he had heard the one about the old lady who went to the Zoo.

More telegrams, telephone calls, and a final appeal to his sense of honour and his duty to a gaping public, overcame Mr. Kelly's healthy dislike for work, and he left the Settlement disguised as a Sanitary Inspector.

SO the "Telegraph" has decided to start a column of "News About People," and has kicked off with a par. about Josef von Sternberg. Well, well, well, Mr. Kelly believes that his column is quite capable of producing all there is to produce about the private lives of people, and has decided to kick off with the biography of a famous scenario writer.

You all know Penelope Pen-pusher, whose "Shanghai Scanties" was one of the most soul-absorbing plays ever produced on the screen. Penelope was lucky enough to be born in Fountain, Penn., U.S.A. Her father was a Waterman, one of the nlbs, but crossed in love. Therefore, from an early age, Penelope had an inkling of human passions. Penelope was educated in Penell-vania. Her talent for fiction was noticed when the walls of her schoolroom were found to bear such items as "Elmer Perkins loves Sadie Poggenblatter."

She first burst into print by winning a limerick competition in "Maise's Mag." Later, contributed regular notes on cooking, caterpillar-rearing and numismatic to various papers. Was always attracted by films, and soon wrote a film story. By mistake her story, "Louise the Lover," was sent to "Homesteads and Heartstides," and a short article, "What To Do About Cockroaches," was sent to a film studio. Both were accepted.

The cockroach essay was re-written by six studio writers, retitled "She Laughed At Love," and was an enormous success as a film. Penelope was summoned to Hollywood, and paid $500 a week to write film stories. After six months ($13,000) she wrote "What Not To Do About Cockroaches." This was re-written, called "Abandoned," and beat many box-office records. Another article, "Making Cockroach Destroyer," was a hit as "He Who Loves Last."

THEN Penelope began to get original. She wrote "Black Beetles in The Home." The film of this was called "Women Men Win," but was a flop. The studio threatened to cut her salary, so she immediately wrote "The Cockroach: What To Do About It," which was a crashing success as a film under the title, "Love Lives On." Now, after only eighteen months in Hollywood, Penelope is earning $2,000 a week, and is the author of such smashing film hits as "Stripy Husband" (Cockroaches in the Home).

NATURE DETECTIVE SOLVES— Bird cannibal mystery

ONE small stray feather, saxeblue and mould green, the green like the varnished sheen of a cat's eye, stirs un- easily in the morning breeze.

Some yards away below, an oak tree lies a mass of feathers of a similar hue, every one of which appears to have been pulled cleanly and separately apart. A few soft down feathers are suspended in the delicate tracery of a spider's web slung in the bushes below the tree.

One or two minute bones show startlingly white against the green of the grasses. A large feather, grey as the ash of a wood fire, adheres to pin pricks of blood found on a two-inch smooth length in the middle of a low branch immediately above the bushes.

What tragedy is this? What was the victim? And the killer? What is the significance of the two-inch length of smooth bark? And the feather dissection?

EXPLANATION

The size and curious colour of the first stray feather show that the victim was a blue-bird. From the evidence it is not only possible to deduce that the bird of prey, or the killer, was of the hawk species, but that it was a sparrow-hawk.

When such a feather dissection is found it is safe to assume that it is the work of a member of the hawk family, especially so when the feathers are found beneath the branch of a tree. Hawks invariably tear and pluck their prey, and usually favour a chosen branch for this specialised butchery.

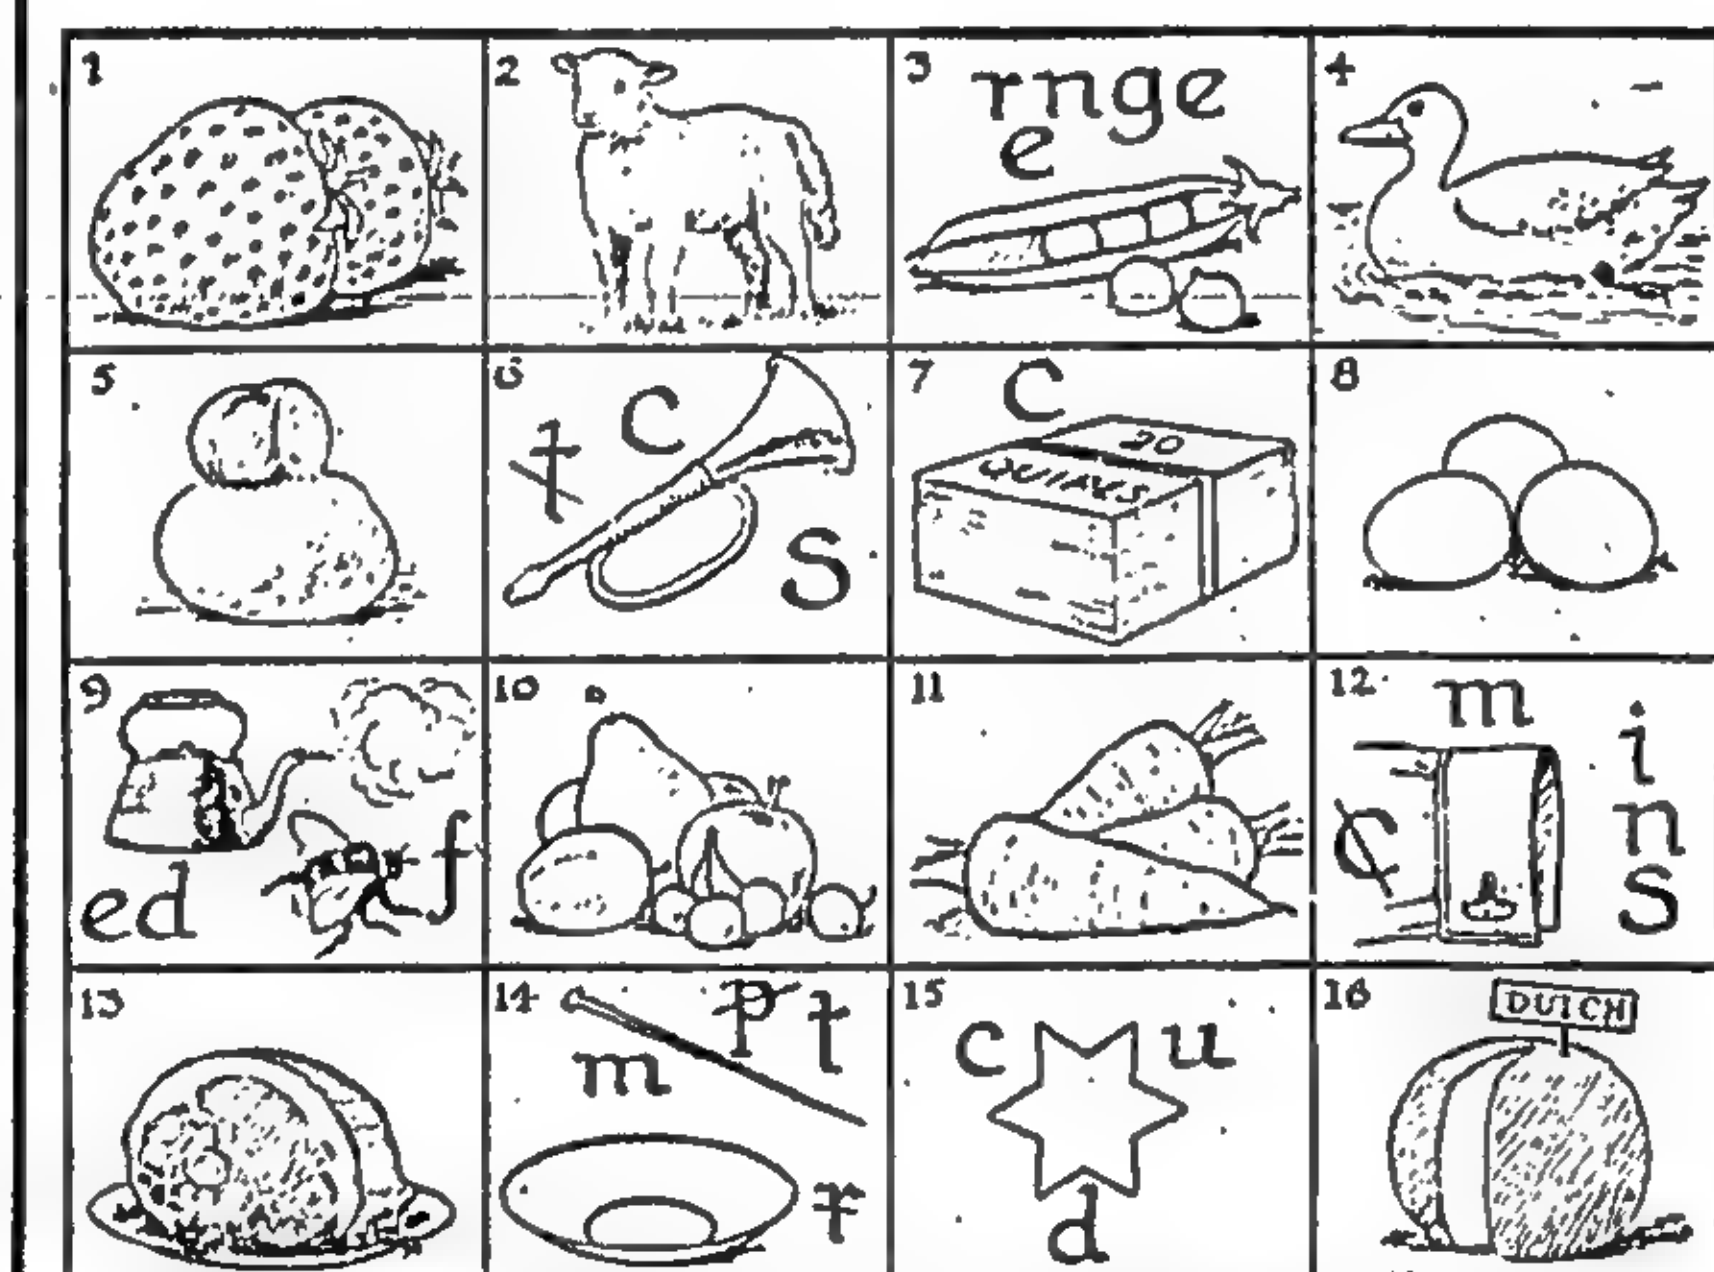

A closer inspection of the branch in question will show that the short portion of smooth bark is caused by the bird's wiping its beak after the feast. The minute drops of blood on this surface are additional proof.

HEDGEROW PIRATE

In pinning down the killing to the sparrow-hawk, consideration is taken first of the ashen-grey feather found adhering to the blood on the branch. The plumage of the sparrow-hawk is of this shade, whereas its close relation, the kestrel, is of chestnut hue.

Again the kestrel is a hoverer, and more fond of fur than feathers. The sparrow-hawk delights in flying piratical fashion over hedge- rows, and takes a heavy toll of small bird life. The single feather found first marks the spot where the hawk stooped and made his clutch.

Girls' and Boys' Corner

Dear Kiddies.—You didn't send in quite so many entries last week. Why was that, I wonder? Did you find the Competition too hard? After all, the Seniors only needed to send in a painting and the Juniors a drawing. Perhaps you find it a bit difficult to do the whole of the work yourselves, but you've got to do so at school; haven't you?

Still, there were some very good efforts, in both classes. Taking age and good colouring into account, I find that the best Senior entry was that of Henry Lau (aged 11), 516 Nathan Road, Kowloon.

In the Junior Section, the prize goes to—Teddy Shuster (aged 9), 58 Canton Road, Kowloon.

So this time, both prizes go to Kowloon. Will the winners call at the "Telegraph" Office for their prizes? Commended for good work are Louise Gomez, Leon Silva, and Margie Xavier among the Seniors; and Joan Guilman, Kenneth Prince, Kathleen Morrison and Alfred Lau amongst the Juniors.

This week, kiddies, I'm going to give you something quite new, and I hope lots of you will enter. Each of the 16 pictures shown in sketch illustrates the name of an article of food. Decide what they are, then pair up the names to make eight everyday dishes. I'll give you your names and answers. No. 1 and 7 together give you Strawberries and Cream. Then there are Lamb and Duck, and.....

Having found the eight answers, write or print them in a neat list on a postcard or piece of paper. Add your name and address. There will again be two prizes—one for children from 10 to 14, and another for those under 10. Address your entries to Uncle Eddie, c/o "Hongkong Telegraph," so as to reach him not later than 4 p.m. on Wednesday. Do your best, children. Uncle Eddie.

LACK of Vitamin F in food is causing an increase of Beri-beri in Hongkong. This is beri-beri bad, so the noted scientist, Professor E. K., has decided to tackle the problem.

For a start he has discovered the following new Vitamins:

VITAMIN O: An unpopolar vitamin. Potent factor in dissolution of friendships and the breaking of engagements. It is found extensively in onions, shallots and garlic. It is liable to set up an unpleasant condition when combined with Vitamin B, but this may be remedied by soap.

VITAMIN P: Large quantities of this Vitamin are derived from beer. It is not of much value.

VITAMIN S: "The 'It' Vitamin. Combines with Vitamin A to produce the famous Vitamins 'S.A.' Don't know exactly where it comes from, but we are collecting telephone numbers of females who have it. We would like them to sample some of our Vitamin X (see below).

VITAMIN X: A peculiar Vitamin. One X, given to a girl who has Vitamin 'S.A.', usually produces palpitation of the heart, which is increased with further dosage. Strangely enough, however, XXX produces an entirely different intoxicating feeling.

People in the News.

HE'S BEEN IN 49 PRISONS.

SURPRISE broadcast from ZBW on Thursday night was by Eric Malpas, self-styled "Globe-Trotting Street Singer".

He is a young Australian singing and cycling round world. Forewarned about "British prestige", he made no attempt to sing in streets of Hongkong, and after three days "look-see", left yesterday along Castle Peak road for Shanghai and north.

Troubadour's greatest worry are frontier officials. Most countries don't want Globe-trotting Troubadours—they think they might be another species of communist agent.

So Malpas has determined this time to reach Russia, via China, Manchukuo and Mongolia. He will travel around China until the end of winter, and then try and cross into the Soviet, where, most likely, he will be rejected as a potential "capitalist" spy.

In Malpas' own words, he "sings to live and lives to sing." Once he starts singing, in fact, it is almost impossible to stop him. The police of twenty countries have tried—not result, imprisoned 49 times—but he still persists in singing.

He has toured New Zealand, Tasmania, Australia, Ceylon, Arabia, Egypt, Malta, England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Canada, the United States, Mexico, France, Germany and Holland, and has not been exactly welcomed in any of these countries. His book of newspaper clippings looks like a Cook's Tourist Guide to the world.

Once upon a time, Malpas was self-conscious. His cure was singing. "If you can get up enough courage to sing before a crowd, you'll never be self-conscious again," he says.

Regurgitated

MAGICIAN Max Malini is probably one of the cleverest men in world when it comes to handling card packs. Just by way of experiment, yesterday, I tried him with a brand new pack, purchased by myself from a local store. He shuffled, I cut, he dealt five poker hands. One was Ace, King, Queen, Jack, Ten of Hearts, second was Three Kings, Two Queens, third was Four Nines, fourth was Eight, Seven, Six, Five, Four of Spades, fifth was four Threes.

"That's why I never play poker," Max told me. "If I win, there's always the chance someone will accuse me of cheating; if I lose, they give me the razz!"

Just by way of variation, he asked me to think of a cupped as I mentioned Clubs, regurgitated it, folded, through his hat heaven knows where.

Any man who does that thing is safer on a stage than at a poker game.

He Flies Through the Air

PERSONAL friend of His Excellency the Governor is Air Commodore Sydney William Smith, O.B.E., Officer Commanding the Royal Air Force in the Far East. He arrived here from Singapore by R.A.F. seaplane early in week, departed yesterday on homeward trek.

Air Commodore Smith's first visit to Hongkong was to witness investiture of Hongkong's new Governor in December last. That was about the only occasion in recent years in which he has travelled by steamer. In intervening nine months, he has travelled extensively by air, recent flight being to Australia, where, accompanied by Deputy Premier "Doc" Earle Page, he made survey of new R.A.A.F. base at Darwin.

Unpublished incident in connection with flight was Dr. Page's ducking at Darwin. As the Doctor was stepping from flying boat to waiting dinghy, he slipped and almost fell into harbour. He managed to retain hold on flying boat, and remained suspended with his legs in water until assistance arrived.

As they trap, on an average,

ERIC MALPAS:

Sings to Live, and Lives to Sing about six crocodiles a day in Darwin harbour, no one was more relieved at happy ending than "Doc". Page himself.

He Was Different

ANOTHER Smith is in the news this week, although name "Smith" is only half of it. As you've guessed subject is Mr. Edward G. Smith-Wright, manager of local branch of E. D. Sassoon Banking Corporation.

S-W is somewhat of a paradox, inasmuch as his life story is not one of son-of-a-bank-banker turned-actor but son-of-a-banker turned-actor.

Acting in his blood, various ancestors having followed theatrical career. Great-grandfather Charlie Young was one of the top-liners of his day, while Uncle J. Smith-Wright died on stage whilst rehearsing at St. James Theatre in London. A younger sister has given rein to instinctive urge to go on stage, has appeared in several productions in metropolitan Hongkong A.D.C.'s Smith-Wright, however, resisted all temptations to become professional actor, and his only stage appearances have been with am-tour shows. In between banking he has found time to play with Malvern A.D.C. at home, similar bodies in Calcutta, Bombay, Rangoon and Shanghai, and, since 1934, with Hongkong's A.D.C. With latter he has given us delightful performances in "Musical Chairs", "Lover's Leap".

Baronet-Sailor.

H.M.S. Dauntless, which has arrived home from Hongkong to be recommissioned, is to lose her captain, Sir Lionel Doveton Sturdee.

He is the only son of the hero of the Falkland Islands naval battle. He has been in the Navy for more than 30 years, and 11 years ago succeeded to the baronetcy, on the death of his father. Sir Lionel is being transferred to H.M.S. Resolution. He was 53 on September 3rd.

Envoy's Headache

MOST perturbed man in North China to-day is not Shanghai's Wu Te-chen, but Japambassador Shigeru Kawagoe. Right on heels of appointment to Nanking he has to deal with recalcitrant Chinese assassins on left, restrain rebellious military colleagues on right.

Most of Mr. Kawagoe's life has been spent in China, and he knows something of mentality of people with whom he has to deal. There is probably no diplomat who knows more of China, and he thinks he knows the Chinese just as well.

He was special envoy to Manchukuo in 1933, just as Japan was getting to grips with her new problems there. Then he came south to Canton, from where he was transferred to Tientsin.

Mr. Kawagoe is man in whom Japan's Foreign Office places great trust. Although militarists don't openly dislike him, they are always very suspicious of any diplomat who doesn't tote a gun, and will almost certainly give him some headaches before Shanghai. "Incidents" are allowed to die natural deaths.

Hongkong's Flour.

TWO Australians are planning to establish flour milling industry in Hongkong with idea of capturing market in South China, Philippines and Malaya.

They are Mr. W. Watkins, financial expert, and Mr. E. C. Jurian, wheat and flour authority. At present Hongkong imports from Australia about a million piculs of flour every year and Manila buys even more.

Mr. Watkins says that it will be much cheaper to erect a flour mill in Hongkong than in Sydney. Labour will be cheaper and immense duty payable on machinery entering Australia will be avoided.

Cheaper In Hongkong.

A FEW years ago a similar mill was erected in Hongkong but it failed.

The Australian pair have thoroughly investigated the failure which they state, was due to over speculation and inability to buy wheat at a world parity price.

To-day wheat all over the world costs practically the same to all millers, and in Hongkong the Australian wheat would have a slight advantage owing to freight rates, while the cost of milling would probably be less than almost anywhere in the world.

ABOVE you see face of beauty, now in Hongkong, to whom belongs legs shown below. Owner of both is Miss Pat Sykes, now appearing at Hongkong Hotel with J. A. Andrew.

What makes picture below newsworthy is that each delicious limb is insured for $5,000. Miss Sykes took this precaution following bus accident at home.

One of terrors of theatrical world is "lay-up," which means terrific loss of popularity owing to lack of continuous publicity.

Most stars are insured one way or another. Marlene Dietrich, for instance, insured her legs for $100,000.

"That's alright, lady," said the conductor. "You just want to shut your eyes, same as he does."

CROWD THRILLED

A large crowd watched with evident appreciation the exhibitions of swimming and diving given yesterday by the Japanese women's World Olympic team in the European Y.M.C.A. bath.

It was Hongkong's first glimpse of par excellence swimming by lady champions, and it was easy to understand from these displays why the Japanese women did as well in Berlin.

They participated in an attractive programme for which Mr. R. Goldmann had been largely responsible, and some really outstanding performances were noted, although no times were recorded.

Owing to their unfamiliarity with the bath, the Japanese did not go all out in the diving displays, but they gave a very good hint as to their prowess. Particular interest was centred on Miss Machida, world champion breaststroke swimmer, and the powerful and speedy way in which she churned through the water was an eye-opener to many.

Hongkong thoroughly enjoyed the opportunity of seeing such fine talent in action, and for this considerable credit is due to Mr. R. Goldmann, Mr. A. W. Ingram and Mr. Bill Ashton, while the Japanese Consul-General, Mr. K. Midzuzawa lent invaluable support.

THE RESULTS

The results were:
100 Yards free-style.—1, Miss K. Kojima (Japan); 2, Miss T. Furuta (Japan); 3, Miss S. Matsumura (Japan); 4, Miss V. Thirwell (Hongkong).
100 Yards back-stroke.—1, Miss H. Morioka (Japan); 2, Miss Takamura (Japan); 3, Miss Leung Wing-han (Hongkong).
Exhibition Diving.—Miss F. Kono did a back-spring somersault and Miss M. Osewa executed a back-pike (Continued on Page 13.)

First Move For Vines-Tilden Tennis
Display Is SuccessfulNOW WE WANT TO KNOW: ARE THEY COMING AND ON WHAT TERMS?

THE first move in the Hongkong L.T.A.'s quest to present Tilden and Vines in tennis exhibitions here has succeeded. The English governing body has said "Yes" to a request for permission to stage the professional exhibition if and when they come to the Colony. A hand-clap for Mr. D. S. Green and other L.T.A. officials for their successful and enterprising action, for it has removed a very serious obstacle. Next thing is: will Tilden and Vines come to Hongkong and if they do will they be ready to play? and if they are, on what terms? Complete silence has reigned on the Pacific coast since the first intimation received locally of the proposed tour of the famous players. For all we know they may now be on the water heading for Japan. In fact if they intend to carry out their original schedule, they should already have left America. But up to the time of writing no further news has been heard here either by the Dollar Steamship Company (who received the original intimation) or the Hongkong L.T.A. But I was informed yesterday that the Dollar Line are keenly interested, and it is expected the cable lines between here and Shanghai will be buzzing during the next day or so.

What Of Shanghai.

SHANGHAI has a direct interest in the proposed tour, and from what I hear, Roubal Canavarro, former Interport player and now professional coach, has been in direct communication with Tilden concerning an exhibition in Shanghai. I believe the Shanghai L.T.A. would not look at the proposition, probably feeling it was risky for an amateur tennis association to dabble in the affairs of professional players. Whether Canavarro has succeeded in fixing anything up is not known, but it is believed that Shanghai has some part of the information. Another port keenly interested is Manila, and there Tilden and Vines can expect to make a fair pot of money, for they would doubtless fill the Rizal Stadium. Furthermore there are one or two very good professional players on top who would be able to assist in making up an attractive programme. It therefore seems that it will be worth the while of Tilden and Vines to give some consideration to a tour of China and the Philippines. I certainly hope to have more definite information to impart during the next week.

Financial Considerations

HONGKONG L.T.A. is naturally at a bit on tenterhooks, because having succeeded in obtaining permission to go ahead with arrangements, they feel that it now only requires a reasonable financial demand from the players to be able to stage one of the most outstanding events in the history of Hongkong tennis. From all accounts the players are inclined towards taking a percentage of gate receipts—an arrangement which would suit the L.T.A. down to the ground. It is a different proposition when a guaranteed lump sum is required. For one thing it is not likely the players will stay more than 24 hours, and should the weather be unpropitious during that time and affect the attendance, it would be easy for the Association to drop a heap of dollars. Maybe Tilden and Vines (who are business men as well as tennis players) will ask for a minimum guarantee, in which case doubtless the L.T.A. could meet them. It is when they start talking in terms of thousands and tens of thousands of dollars that a place like Hongkong must regretfully abstain from handling exhibition matches. They just couldn't pay under such terms. Practically everything then depends on the players themselves. If they are prepared to accept a little smaller profit than usual, then Hongkong can and gladly will accommodate them. Certain it is that the L.T.A. would do everything in its power to persuade the famous players to give us a show. But firstly we should like to know if, and when, the professionals will be coming.

Encouraging News

ENCOURAGING news from the Badminton Front. Fire Brigade are making strenuous efforts to get going and hope to be able to enter teams in the men's doubles, and mixed doubles league. There has been considerable amount of work going on behind the scenes to this end, and the present position is fairly rosy. The personnel of the teams will be slightly different to last season, but everything points to fairly strong combinations being put into the court. To offset this I hear Talkoo Recreation Club will not participate in the league this year. However Talkoo are averse to such a fine court being wasted, and teams or clubs who are not blessed with good playing conditions will be given an opportunity of hiring the court for so much per night. This is an offer which one or two teams would do well to snitch up. It is true Talkoo is somewhat out of the way, but the excellence of the court compensates for any little inconvenience there might be in the way of inaccessibility.

Kowloon C.C. Hopes

LAST evening's assurances that the committee of the Kowloon Cricket Club intends to bear in mind the possibilities of re-starting badminton at that club will be generally welcomed by followers of the game. It was a sad blow to the game in Hongkong when it was found necessary to give it up at the K.C.C. owing to damage caused to the highly sprung dance floor. But the club has expressed its determination to re-introduce badminton at the earliest possible moment, and there are reasons to hope that a definite move in this direction will be made during the next twelve months. But the question of finance is tightly bound up with any scheme which the club may have in mind, and this is the one big reason why the matter has been held in abeyance for the last two years.

Week-End Sports

Carnival

THIS afternoon sees the start of a remarkable week-end of sporting activity. Not only does league football make its bow, but the second half of the racing season begins. Over at the Kowloon Cricket Club, a two-day Interport cricket practice match is taking place, while to-day the lawn bowls league season will be brought to a conclusion. There is also a programme of hockey matches, golf tournaments and yacht races to complete a two-day carnival of sport. All of which is a reminder (although the weather gives the lie direct) that summer is over, and that from now on Hongkong's week-end sporting activities will become more and more intensified. Next week rugby trials will be held, and a short time league cricket will be occupying attention. The present heat-wave is a bit unfortunate for such hard-going sports as rugby, soccer and hockey, but the brilliant sunshine means bigger audiences, and therefore more shekels for club coffers. So that even a heat-wave has its compensations.

Athlete Who Changed
Her SexPROUD TO BE A MAN

New York. Zdenka Kouba, 24-year-old Czechoslovakian, who underwent a surgical operation for the transformation from woman athlete to man, recently arrived in this country and proudly defended his new-found sex.

In broken English, Kouba said that he preferred being a man to woman, and that as soon as a second operation was performed, he would marry.

"I always thought that I should be a boy, but I could not tell my girl companions that, since they would have stoned me to death," Zdenka said. "I hated to wear women's clothing and made sure that I had low-heeled shoes and nothing fancy in the way of under-clothing."

Before his operation last December in Prague, as Zdenka Koubova (the feminine form of his present name "Kouba") he set the women's world record for the 800-metre and 80-metre races in the women's Olympiad in London in 1934.

Immediately after the transformation, many complications arose. Military authorities wondered if he had to serve his regular term of military service, since he was over twenty-one. Athletic societies sought to find the answer as to whether they should take the track records which he held as a woman from "him." Women were a little doubtful about going out with this "man" as girl friends.

Although birth records have been officially changed, Kouba is presently travelling under a woman's passport issued in 1932. The attached photograph shows a girl with brown bobbed hair. To forestall any complications that might arise, officials of the Czechoslovakian government and immigration noted at the bottom of the passport:

"Not to stop or obstruct this person who is now officially a man." Girls and Kouba very attractive at present, although they never appreciated him fully before.

Kouba is in this country to fulfil theatre engagements. He will demonstrate on a treadmill just how he won races as a girl track star.—United Press.

"DIXIE" DEAN BEATS
BLOOMER'S RECORD

London, Sept. 3.

WILLIAM RALPH DEAN—"Dixie" to the Soccer world—yesterday scored his 353rd goal in the Football League. He headed one of the goals by which Everton defeated Sheffield Wednesday.

He thus broke the record aggregate of 352 goals scored by Stephen Bloomer, which had stood unchallenged since 1914.

Bloomer's goals were scored during a period of 22 years, 1892-1914; Dean scored his goals in 13 years, 1923-1936.

Aston Villa are proving Attraction No. 1 in the Second Division of the League. Their visit to Nottingham yesterday resulted in the mid-week attendance for any match in Nottingham being broken, no fewer than 36,000 people paying to see them play.

Our Cricket In Australia May Not Be As Bad As Some Suggest

SAYS TREVOR WIGNALL

It was agreeable to read through William Pollock the other day that G. O. (George Oswald Browning, if you want all his Christian names) Allen, the captain of the M.C.C. cricket team that has sailed for Australia is very satisfied with the sixteen players who will travel with him, and that he thinks their prospects in the Test matches are bright.

The cynical may remark that Allen would not be much of a skipper if he admitted for one moment that he was other than highly optimistic, but the answer is that there are quite a number of people who are also of the opinion that the touring side are due to supply Bradman and Co. with a number of surprises.

It has to be confessed that the majority of the letters that have reached me on the subject are destructive. The term most frequently used is "England's second team," but that, I feel certain, is an indirect reference to the omission of Larwood.

IT WASN'T A LEG-PULL

One correspondent—the may, for all I know to the contrary, be an Australian with a well-developed sense of humour—asks me why our selectors did not pay more attention to the men chosen by certain Australian players as among the best of England's cricketers. For a time I did not quite know whether to regard this as an attempted leg-pull, or whether to seize on it as an excuse for a wide smile.

It seems to me now that the suggestion was made in good faith, which only goes to prove that all the quibblers have not gone to their rest. For years the pouring of sudden admiration on an English player has been a cultivated strategy of Australians. No complaint can be registered for a legitimate move, and it is certainly not made subject to a grumble even when those who pick our teams fall for it.

But isn't it known that many men have been included in English sides solely because they were praised by the Australians? Isn't it also known that these same men made sorry exhibitions when they batted or bowled?

The Australians, like many countries who view Olympic Games with tremendous seriousness, do plenty of thinking before they walk on to fields. Quite rightly they believe that if they can force the inclusion of a player who can be bowled easily, or who can be knocked all over the place when he is handed the ball, they have scored a very distinct advantage.

It may be, as some will undoubtedly claim, that we do not play our games that way, but that is beside the point. Indeed, there are moments when some of us think that the time has arrived for doing a bit of copying if we wish to be enrolled with the winners.

Everywhere it is taken for granted that Australia in the next season of theirs will have an eleven that may prove itself to be the strongest of all time. Bradman, McCabe, and Budecock will definitely take some shifting from the wicket, while if only Grimmett and O'Reilly are depended upon as bowlers we shall have puzzles to solve that will not be simple.

HAMMOND IS BACK

A pleasant side of the picture is presented when we think of the recent doings of such as Hammond. He was out of health when the summer started, but now that he is back to his old state of fitness he has shown that he is at least entitled to be bracketed with Bradman as the greatest cricketer on earth.

Much more would have been heard of his breaking of W. G. Grace's record a few days ago if simultaneously with it we had not had the too early opening of the Soccer programme. Is it too much to state that Hammond is as good as ever he was?

Few would place their hands over their hearts while declaring that there are better all-rounders, but of chief interest to us is the circumstance that his batting form has been recovered just when he wants it.

I am with those who assert that the touring team would have been stronger if Larwood, Gimblett, and Wellard had been invited. No England side, as a matter of fact, is the best we can produce when Larwood is not in it, for it is widely admitted that no cricketer could supply a finer battery than he and Voce. I note from my letters that there is a disposition to snort at the inclusion of Ames. It is obviously felt that his illness precluded him from the right to be in the team, but it cannot be denied that in the last two or three weeks he batted well, and kept wicket with his old skill. Allen objected to because he is a born Australian, and also because he cannot be depended upon to go through a hard season without a crack.

Correspondents who have stressed these matters admittedly have grounds on which to base their contentions, but unfortunately they now serve little purpose, as the selected team is almost ready to depart. In the words of a cliché, all we can hope for is the best.

The more furious of the notes that have been sent me direct attention to the omission of particular men, such as Gimblett, Wellard, Henderson, Poynter, Gover, Nicholls, Bowes, and many others. But that has been the way of things ever since somebody in the long ago—who may no longer be called a genius—hit on the idea of picking representative teams.

That did did more cause trouble and to create controversies than the inventor of wars. G. O. Allen has a tough task in hand, and one that few can envy, but at this late stage—or is it early?—I do not think any of us should add to his difficulties.

K.C.C. DISCUSS SPORTS ACTIVITIES AND DEVELOPMENTS SUGGESTIONS PUT FORWARD AT ANNUAL MEETING

Suggestions to the incoming committees for the development of tennis, lawn bowls and badminton were made yesterday at the annual meeting of the Kowloon Cricket Club, held in the club's pavilion under the chairmanship of Mr. Ezra Abraham, Vice-President.

Mr. A. E. Silkestone said he wished to raise the hands-on of the club to develop the top-half of its grounds for an additional lawn bowls green and tennis courts. He regarded such a scheme as being an excellent means of increasing the club's revenue. He was assured from the chair that the matter would receive full consideration of the committee.

Mr. S. A. Gray complained of the unhappy feature of the club's tennis tournaments which this year showed they had been in existence for eight months and several second round ties were still unplayed. The blame, he said, could be attached partly to the tennis sub-committee and partly to some of the competitors.

He suggested that in future the committee adopt proper measures to ensure the smooth and quick fulfilment of the tournaments. He also suggested to the incoming committee that it should, next season, consider the question of putting two teams in the "A" Division of the tennis league, with a view to training up the younger players. By giving them this experience they would improve their play more quickly, and if the young players were properly encouraged, there was no reason why the club should not produce a Colony champion in the future.

Mr. G. A. White said he hoped that the committee would not lose sight of the possibilities of re-starting badminton at the club. Any assurance that the club was devoting attention to the question would be warmly welcomed by many members. He felt that a club of the importance of the K.C.C. should not ignore a game which was fast becoming one of the most popular in the Colony.

Mr. Abraham said the committee last year went into the question and further attention would be paid to it in the coming months.

The adoption of the report and accounts, which have already been published, was seconded by Mr. C. W. Jeffries, and was carried.

COUNTY CAPTAIN MAKES LAST CATCH: THEN KILLED

London, Sept. 3. Gloucester cricket captain D. A. C. Page died in Cirencester (Glos) Memorial Hospital early to-day from injuries received in a car crash last night—a few hours after the close of the season. The handsome 30-year-old captain had been cheered by the Gloucester crowd as he ended the match against Notts by catching Wheat, giving Gloucester a brilliant victory by an innings and 70 runs.

Page quickly changed, jumped into his car, set off to return to his wife at Stratton, near Cirencester.

He was near his home, when his car came into collision with a motor-cycle and overturned.

Page was unconscious when he was taken to hospital, suffering from internal injuries and haemorrhage. An operation was performed, but he died at 12.30 to-day.

Only a week before R. P. Northway, the amateur Northampton county cricketer, was killed, and A. H. Bakewell, the England and Northamptonshire player, seriously injured in a car crash near Leicester.

The Bishop of Hongkong preached in Westminster Abbey on Sunday, September 6. He will be returning to the Colony in December.

ROYAL NAVY POLO CUP Royal Welch Fusiliers Beat Ulster Rifles

The Royal Welch Fusiliers did not need the one goal they received on handicap when they won the Royal Naval Polo Cup at Kowloon City yesterday, defeating the Royal Ulster Rifles by five goals to one. With their fine ponies, the Fusiliers had rather the better part of the game throughout the chukkers.

The first chukker was uneventful, no goals being scored by either side, but in the second the Fusiliers hit the ball between the posts twice, to make the score three to nothing.

In the third chukker, Lt.-Col. Rodwell scored the Rifles' only goal with a pretty shot under his pony's neck. Mr. Kelly countered for the Welshmen with a powerful long shot from beyond the 60 yard line which brought the score to 4-1.

In the last chukker Kelly again scored for the Fusiliers, resulting in an easy win for this team.

The Rifles played a magnificent game, but were entirely out-poled. Capt. Frizelle, the mainstay of the Welshmen with a powerful long shot, started to finish, ably supported by his companions, who were handicapped by their ponies.

The winners succeeded through better combination in their team work from the outset and accurate hitting throughout.

The teams were: Royal Ulster Rifles—Lt.-Col. Rodwell, Capt. Frizelle, Messrs. Harris and Fitz G. Donlea. Royal Welch Fusiliers—Messrs. Kelly, Bosanquet, Prichard and Parker Jervis.

LOST 10 LBS. IN TWO-MONTHS

Not too Old to Reduce at Fifty

Here is a letter which proves that there is no necessity to tolerate excessive fatness, even at the age of 50:—

"I was becoming too fat after reaching 50, and had attacks of rheumatism and indigestion, and my outlook on life was bad. Being a salesman my condition lowered my business capacity considerably. I took ordinary salts and other medicines, but they did not do any permanent good. Then I commenced taking Kruschen as directed—and soon began to feel different—brighter, stronger, had more energy, no rheumatism, and to my surprise, after two months I lost 10 lbs. in weight. I recommend Kruschen on all my travels."—W.J.G.

The numerous vital salts in Kruschen stimulate and tune up the bodily functions. Your stomach, liver and kidneys all feel the immediate benefit. Your blood is cleansed of impurities and becomes invigorated and refreshed. You forget indigestion, rheumatism and depression in a new and unaccustomed feeling of physical and mental exhilaration.

GARDENING PAGE

The new garden is getting along nicely in spite of the heat. The expert advises Mr. Brown on

Putting down the paths

I DREADED the thought of discussing paths again with Brown, knowing that since I had told him to excavate to a depth of a foot the temperature had been in the region of the eighties.

So I peered nervously over the fence first. Sure enough, there was Brown gazing down dependently into a long trench.

It beats Me

I PUT on a cheerful smile, remarking, "No need to tell me that the recent heat-wave has upset your programme of work."

"Not a bit of it," I get over that by working in the early mornings and evenings, but what beats me is to know what to do when there is a cloudburst. Look at my flooded excavations for the paths!"

"A blessing in disguise," Brown. You can now appreciate the advantage of good drainage foundations; they can be made to help drain a garden—a point often overlooked. You can also see where water would lie in wet weather. A sump at the lowest level filled with stones will eventually drain this water away."

I observed Brown was beginning to regain his enthusiasm, as I continued, "You must consider next the kind of surface you are going to put on the paths."

"Those which get most traffic must have a substantial surface. The paths near the house and around that seat should be paved (cray or rectangular paving), tiled or bricked, whichever you prefer. But remember the low walling must be of similar material. Around the pool have a grass path.

Cinders would Do

"PAVING needs a layer of rough clinker six inches thick, well rammed down, then a few inches of finer cinder. Then bed the stones in fine ashes or sand, using a straight-edge and spirit level to get an even surface."

"A cinder path would suffice for the kitchen garden."

"All this work, Brown, will keep you busy, but I promised to mention something about the lawn. Well, if you want a change of job, trench the site and bury the turf under the first spit, chopping it up with the spade. Before covering it, throw on some lime."

Worms like Snakes

"DOES that get rid of worms?" asked Brown. "They're almost like young snakes in this soil."

"Worms do not like lime, but the object of putting it on the chopped turf is to hasten decomposition of the grass."

"To minimise the worm-trouble, and at the same time have a well-drained, moss-free lawn, have two loads of ashes delivered, in addition to that required for the paths. After the site has been dug, start at one end of the lawn by taking out a shallow trench a yard wide and six inches below a garden line stretched across the lawn level with the path. Make the bottom of the trench flat, then cover it with three inches of ashes."

"I see," said Brown, "repeat the operation until the whole area is done, and the ashes form a worm-barrier when the top soil is replaced."

"Just so, Brown. When finished the soil will, of course, be higher than the path, but when it has settled it will be about the right height—an inch or so above the path."

"Ready for sowing the grass seed," said Brown, excitedly, with visions of a perfect greensward shortly.

Took a firm Line

HERE I had to be firm. It was no use my building up Brown's hopes of a lawn this summer. I told him there is a difficulty in getting even turf to survive.

"This was a great disappointment, but he realised there was wisdom in not sowing seed now, when probably it would all have to be done again in September. Besides, I told him, in the meantime the soil would be weathering, and he could keep the site clean of weeds."

POEM

TO HIS LOVE

SHALL I compare thee to a summer's day?
Thou art more lovely and more temperate:
Rough winds do shake the darling buds of May,
And summer's lease hath all too short a date:
Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines,
And often is his gold complexion dimm'd;
And every fair from fair sometime declines,
By chance, or Nature's changing course, untrimm'd.
But thy eternal summer shall not fade
Nor lose possession of that fair thou owest;
Nor shall Death brag thou wanderest in his shade,
When in eternal lines to time thou growest:
So long as men can breathe, or eyes can see,
So long lives this, and this gives life to thee.
W. SHAKESPEARE.

Suzy is rescued from her fate by the man she has hated in her desperation. They take her to the races and because she places Terry Moore's wager on the wrong horse, she is richer by twenty pounds. He is deeply attracted to her and she likes him. Also she is impressed by the fact that he has saved four hundred pounds and plans to leave the factory where he works to perfect an invention which he says will bring him a fortune.

CHAPTER THREE

Suzy was young but she was wise beyond her years. She knew it would be better for her and for Terry—especially for Terry—if she returned to her lodgings. Mrs. Briggs was so fawning in her cordiality that Suzy was surprised at first until she discovered that Terry had paid out of what he called her winnings, not only the amount she was in arrears, but a month's rent in advance.

There was a letter waiting for her, from Maudie. There was a money order in it and a suggestion that she come on to Paris at once. She was signing in another café and if it wasn't the best in the city, at least it was better than the first one. Also, she had spoken to the proprietor and he had agreed to take Suzy. Just two days before, Suzy would have been elated and off by the first train and boat for Paris. But now there wasn't a moment's hesitation.

"Thanks a heap, but I think it better to stay here. Things taking a turn in right direction. Will write particulars soon. Love."

Usually Suzy was a girl of her word and she honestly meant to write Maudie all that was happening, but she was too busy and too excited to sit down and write. There was something else. She couldn't write Maudie frankly. She could tell her what a fine young man Terry was, how much she liked and admired him. But something in her would not let her tell the one real friend she had in the world that she was deliberately planning to marry him. That wouldn't have been so bad if she were in love with him. She wasn't.

Half in play, half in earnest, when she was alone she would rehearse a scene she would play with Terry. She would say she had to go back to best thing to do was to go back to Terry. He would tell him she would never forget all his kindness to her, his caring for her when she was hungry, she would tell him she was misty and she would ask him to stop for a moment before she choked voice if he would kiss her just once, for good, before she said away, never to see him again.

It would be very touching and she knew what the outcome would be. Terry would never let her go. She would have comfort and security and love all the days of her life. She knew that Terry was one of those who would be faithful until death.

There was no need to rush the little scene. It was good for them to become comrades—and with every day she knew Terry loved her more. Once or twice she asked him, really solicitous, if he wasn't spending too much time with her, neglecting his invention. She knew by the way his face lighted up when he mentioned it, how much it meant to him. He insisted that he had struck a thing, that sometimes there must be a flash of inspiration and one could not force that. One could only wait for it and recognize it when it came.

He never talked much about the factory where he spent his days, except to tell her that he knew practically everything there was to know about buttons. She hadn't much curiosity about it—a factory didn't stir a very interesting. Then one night while they were eating dinner, he said suddenly:

"I have an idea. Let's drive over to the factory. I think maybe that thing which has been bothering me can be figured out in double quick time."

"Oh, the inspiration at last!" she asked eagerly.

"Not exactly, but with you there

—why didn't I think of it before? You are my lucky piece. With you there—just you and me in the big silent plant, I'm sure it will come to me."

"I've got it," he cried suddenly, swinging her around. "You've turned the trick. Only a few weeks now, Suzy, and you'll see it ready for the market."

"Oh, Terry, that's too wonderful. You don't know how happy—"

"Yes I do, dear," he said huskily. "And as for me—it isn't just the invention; it's this—he drew a paper from his pocket, 'I got this marriage licence the other day and promised myself I'd ask you not to let it go to waste when I knew I had something real to offer you. You will marry me, won't you, Suzy?'"

Suddenly all the actor in her left Suzy. She just couldn't go through with it. For her, it would be all right, it wouldn't be fair to Terry. "Terry," she said earnestly, "listen to me, listen carefully. I think you are the finest man in the world and it's an awful temptation to say 'yes' but I'm not going to say it. I'd planned to, really. Don't be shocked, but I must tell you the truth. You deserve it. But now I can't do it—for I don't love you. I'd be doing it just because without you I'd be alone in a strange city, struggling along to keep alive. You deserve better than that, Terry."

"That's my business," Terry's voice was almost rough. "How do you know whether you love me or not? You're hardly more than a child. It isn't just that I have loved enough for both of us and to spare. But I'm a conceited bloke and I'm willing to take a chance on your being crazy about me. So, my noble young—"

They had been so engrossed in each other that they had not heard a door below open or heavy steps mounting the stairs.

"Who is that?" It was a woman's voice calling in guttural tones. "It's Mrs. Schmidt, the owner," gasped Terry in a whisper. "Hide there in that dark corner. I'll get rid of her in a minute."

Terry bent over the model as if working on it, until the door to the room opened and Mrs. Schmidt entered.

"So, it is you," she shouted, "coming into my factory after hours, wasting my lights and my power and my machinery on your own silliness."

"But I didn't think you'd mind. Mrs. Schmidt," said Terry with his most disarming smile. "And it is my own time and I thought—"

"You thought. Now I think and vat I think, I say. Dat is—you get out and stay out. Dis very minute. You're fired."

"Very well, Mrs. Schmidt, if that is the way you feel about it," said Terry. "I'll just pack this contraption—"

"You will not—not now. To-morrow you come for it, get any way coming to you and dat's the end."

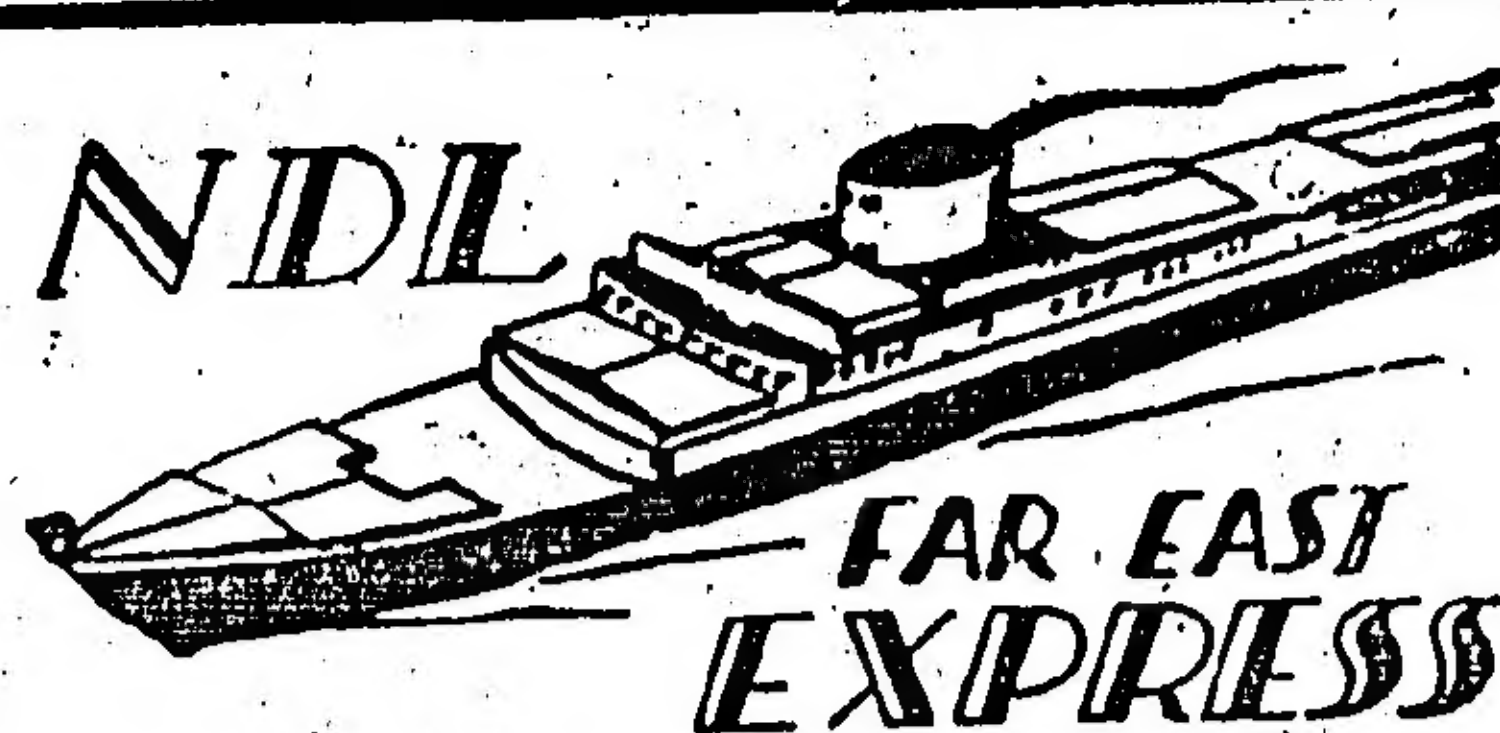

"Very well," he answered. "And go out de front way—not the back."

He started toward the door, as she went into her office. He wondered why she was so excited and insisted on his leaving so quickly and by the front way. He whispered to Suzy to go down quietly and wait for him in the car parked around the corner. He would be down in a minute. He switched off the lights and shut the door with a bang. Then he waited in the shadows—why he didn't know, but he couldn't resist the impulse. Almost immediately he heard steps, stealthy step they were, coming up the back stairs. A man and a woman entered. He could see only that the man wore a chauffeur's uniform and that the woman was beautifully dressed. They went into Mrs. Schmidt's office.

He crept quietly toward the door, stood on a chair and looked in through the transom. He saw Mrs. Schmidt take some letters from the safe and give them to the visitors, but just then Mrs. Schmidt saw him. The strangers did not turn, he saw only their backs. But Mrs. Schmidt came toward the door and opened it. To his surprise she was beaming on him.

"Why you never tell me you know German?" she asked.

"Well, anyway, this is a lucky night

"You see they were talking in German and I don't know a word of it. But what's the difference? We're driving straight to a clergyman friend of mine, so this licence won't go to waste."

Mrs. Schmidt answered the anxious looks on the faces of her callers when she returned to the office by shaking her head. Then she wrote something on a card and without a word handed it to them. They nodded silently.

"Terence Moore—30 Telling Street" was what she had written.

(To-morrow: Suzy sees the mysterious woman face to face again that night and dashes away in horror from the catatonic state which she is faced.)

STABILISATION PACT EFFECTED

United States' assurance that the gold content of the dollar will not be reduced in the event of the franc being devalued. Similar assurance by Britain are reported to have been given already.

It is reported an accord was practically reached before the conferences adjourned last night.

May Withdraw Support

Government fiscal circles indicated the United States may withdraw the financial support they have been giving intermittently to the French franc through the Stabilisation Fund and let the franc find its own level.
It is said that such action would exert an immediate influence towards compelling Paris either to devalue or abandon the gold standard, either completely, like England, by placing an embargo on gold exports and establishing a managed currency, or partially, like Belgium.

Experts are most interested in London reports, due to the fact that one of the influences hitherto hindering a readjustment of the French currency has been Britain's insistence of maintaining liberty of action to protect her foreign trade and other economic interests by lowering the value of the pound, when necessary.

Experts here for many months have privately predicted that France would sooner or later be compelled to devalue or abandon gold. However, the world monetary and international political considerations previously induced the Treasury to support the franc, due to the belief that devaluation would bring the overthrow of the Blum Government, which might have affected seriously world peace and economic conditions.
Now, however, it is believed the situation has altered sufficiently, and the Blum Government has been long enough in power to weather the storm which is regarded certain in the event of monetary reforms in France.

However, it is indicated, that America's future action will depend on the actions of the "Sterling bloc" countries, the general decline of which might bring further devaluation of the dollar, although no general apprehension exists that such action will follow French devaluation or abandonment of gold.—United Press.

Decline To Comment

Washington, Sept. 25.
The question of action to be taken in the event of the devaluation of French currency is believed to have been discussed in conferences between Mr. Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasury, and the State Department currency experts which opened last night and were resumed to-day.

While Treasury officials decline to comment, Wall Street observers are confident that both the United States and France could weather without grave difficulties any short-lived squalls which might follow an embargo on the export of French gold or the devaluation of the franc.
The majority of financial authorities anticipate such action would only be followed by the slightest market disturbances here.—Reuter.

French Cabinet Rises

Paris, Sept. 25.
The Cabinet meeting ended at 8 p.m., the Minister of the Interior issuing a communiqué promising to communicate later in the evening.
It is announced that the House will be closed until Tuesday and an emergency meeting of Parliament (which normally would not meet until November) will be held Monday.

It is no secret in well-informed financial quarters that France would only contemplate devaluation within the framework of a currency alignment with sterling and dollar, thus assuring a common level of prices.
Negotiations to that end have been proceeding for the past three months.
It remains to be seen to what extent the American and British Governments will give assurances not to undertake any fresh depreciation of their currencies, following the devaluation of the franc.—Reuter.

RADIO ORDINANCE CHANGES

PRESS LICENCE INCREASED SHIPPING AFFECTED

A proclamation in the Government Gazette this morning confirms the report, published in the Telegraph last week, that the important Telecommunication Ordinance of 1930 comes into force on October 1.

This Ordinance, amongst other things, regulates the employment of radio operators on all vessels trading to and from Hongkong, bringing this Colony into line with other nations regarding Safety of Life at Sea.

Under this Ordinance, wireless operators must possess an operator's licence issued in conformity with the Madrid Convention. Licences previously issued by the Hongkong Government will become invalid.

Before Government could bring the Telecommunication Ordinance into force, it became necessary to establish a wireless training school, in order to educate wireless operators employed on Hongkong ships to the standard of efficiency required by the Madrid Convention.

In addition to regulating the status of radio operators, the Telecommunication Ordinance defines the type of apparatus to be carried on ships. Until recently, many ships accessed in Hongkong did not conform to requirements.

HIGHER PRESS FEE

As anticipated by the Telegraph last week, Government is not waiting until the end of the year before increasing the new scale of radio broadcast licence fees into effect. As from October 1, listeners will be charged $12 per annum for broadcast licences. These licences in future will not be issued on a pro rata basis, but will be valid for twelve months from the date of issue. Previously, all licences expired on December 31 each year.

Although Government anticipates taking over all radio traffic reception next year, it appears from the regulations that New Agencies at present receiving their own press traffic direct may be allowed to continue doing so upon payment of a fee of $500 per annum for a Receiving and Publishing Radio Station Licence. Previously, New Agencies were allowed to receive this traffic, with certain reservations, upon payment of the ordinary broadcast licence fee. It is understood that the principal agencies affected by this new Regulation are United Press and Trans-Ocean. Kuo-Min.

BRITISH TREASURY POLICY

Judging that the desired stability of the principal currencies cannot be insured on a gold basis except after the re-establishment of a lasting equilibrium between the various economic systems, it has decided, with this object, to propose to Parliament a readjustment of its currency.

The British and American Governments welcomed this decision in the hope that it would establish more solid foundations for the stability of international economic relations, the statement continues.

The British, American and French Governments have declared their intention to continue to use appropriate available resources so as to avoid as far as possible any disturbance of the basis of international exchanges resulting from the proposed readjustment. They will arrange for such consultation for this purpose as may prove necessary between the three Governments and authorised agents.

AID TO TRADE

The British Government is convinced that the success of the above policy is linked with the development of international trade.

In particular, the greatest importance is attached to action being taken without delay to relax the present system of quotas and exchange controls, with a view to their abolition.

The British Government, in common with the United States and French Governments, invites the cooperation of other nations to realise the policy laid down in the present declaration.

The Government trusts no country will attempt to obtain an unreasonable competitive exchange advantage, and thereby hamper the effort to restore more stable economic relations, which is the aim of the three Governments mentioned herein to promote.—Reuter.

POLICY UNCHANGED

London, Sept. 26.
The British declaration on the tripartite monetary agreement arises from discussions between the Government concerned held during the past few days, France having indicated the possibility of her readjustment of the value of the franc.
These discussions were confined to the three countries mainly concerned as any enlargement of the field would have been inconsistent with the need for secrecy essential to the success of the French monetary measures.

The declaration does not involve any change in the British monetary policy.—Reuter.

HOLLAND SECURE

The Hague, Sept. 25.
In connection with the new deval-uations in the exchange market, the Government to-day announced that it was maintaining its monetary policy unchanged.—Reuter.
